$2-million granted for up to 30 beds

New committee will be formed to decide where funds will be allocated

by MARTHA PERKINS

In a much-awaited announcement, MPP Dennis Drainville says the province has committed $2.3-million for construction of up to 30 long-term care beds in the county.

"I was elected with one promise and that promise was the healthcare needs of Haliburton County would have to be responded to," Drainville said at a press conference at the county office on Friday. The new NDP politician was obviously relieved and excited that he was finally able to live up to that promise.

The funding is in response to the recent strategy plan on the county's healthcare needs. The plan called for construction of 40 beds as well as enhanced and new programs to help people avoid institutionalization. There were four options for where those beds should be built, basically splitting them between Haliburton and Minden villages.

The $2.3-million is for capital costs of "up to three projects: renovations to support ambulatory and diagnostic services at the Haliburton Hospital; a feasibility study and possible redevelopment of Minden Hospital and Hyland Crest to provide long-term care, flexible respite and convalescent care, and emergency out-patient care; and provision of up to 30 new long-term beds in the county."

No new monies would have to be raised by the county. Instead, the project will incorporate the $400,000 seasonal and permanent residents raised three years ago and $266,000 committed by the county.

Forty new jobs will be created as a result, Drainville says, "and that's 40 jobs we don't have today."

In reference to the feasibility study, a letter dated September 20 from the Ministry of Health to the District Health Council says "The area manager for the Community Health and Support Services division, Peterborough office, proposes to continue working with Hyland Crest to redevelop the facility and its services. This planning should be done in conjunction with the review of the Minden hospital site. For example, the Minden Hospital and Hyland Crest could be integrated in the future."

The Minden Hospital is made with wood and cannot be expanded; Hyland Crest is 25 years old and needs to be adapted to aging residential needs. Drainville also announced $55,000 to help Hyland Crest provide wheelchair-accessible washrooms and bathing areas on its lower floor.

To decide where the beds should be built and which projects get priority, a new committee will be formed in January. This committee, made up of people from all segments of the community, will review the steering plan report and consult with local and provincial agencies on how and where the money will be spent.

It is expected the committee will take at least a year to come up with a final report.

Long-term beds come after a 14-year struggle for funds

The following is a brief outline of the struggle to get approval for long-term beds in Haliburton County, as outlined by Marshall Elliott, executive director of the Kawartha/Haliburton/Pine Ridge District Health Council. He was speaking to a St. Joseph's General Hospital board of trustees meeting Tuesday night at Hyland Crest.

In 1977, the District Health Council identified the need for 17 chronic care beds in Haliburton County, the only county in the province which does not have chronic care facilities. In 1986, Health Minister Murray Elston approved construction of 18 beds. Provincial policy then changed, frowning on construction of new facilities. The new emphasis is to be on taking care of people in their homes so they do not need to be institutionalized. Therefore, in 1989, Health Minister Elinor Caplan put a freeze on any new projects, even though residents had raised $400,000 and the county had committed $266,000 — one-third of the total costs — to build the unit, for which plans were ready to go to tender.

Caplan called for a study into the county's long-term needs. The study was supposed to take two months but it lasted a year and a half. Investigation revealed there were 27 patients whose needs were beyond that of even Hyland Crest or Extendicare. Healthcare professionals "had a high level of anxiety about caring for these people."

This spring, the committee announced the need of 40 new long-term care beds. The report was sent to the Ministries of Health, Housing and Community and Social Services for comment.

The cost of the study was $80,000 for consultants' fees alone. Elliott did not mention total costs of the study.

Hospitals warned of tight budgets

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Hospitals should be preparing for bad news about next year's funding, the executive director of St. Joseph's General Hospital told the board of trustees Tuesday night.

"In past months we've heard a lot about considerable funding pressures," Frank Lussing says of the province's aim to cut $2-billion in spending. "The word we're getting is next year will be a tough year but it may affect us this year as well. At the moment, things look a bit shaky."

Lussing referred to a letter from Dennis Timbrell, president of the Ontario Hospital Association. There will not likely be funding higher than this year's levels, Timbrell says. "The Minister (of Health, Frances Lankin) stated it is time to 'roll up the shirtsleeves and work together towards solutions.' . . . She said they are asking both unions and employers to lower monetary expectations for settlements and to look at non-monetary trade offs (job security has already been identified by some unions as such an item.)"

This doesn't look good for St. Joseph's, which also owns the Haliburton and Minden hospitals. At present, the Peterborough hospital has a deficit of $531,606 (as opposed to a budget deficit of $589,500), Haliburton has a deficit of $36,170 ($30,200), and Minden has a deficit of $53,240 ($39,822.)

"At Haliburton, expenses are $4,275 over budget due to higher costs for benefits and medical staff renumeration," says the Finance and Audit Committee report. "At Minden, expenses are $13,480 over budget due to higher costs for supplies and other expenses."

In other hospital news, Haliburton Hospital has had the most significant increase in emergency visits. Up until September 31, there were 3,642 emergency visits at Haliburton, up from about 3,000. "That's something we can probably anticipate more of," says Lussing.

In Minden there were 2,538 visits, a slight decrease. With the BEARER OF GOOD NEWS: MPP Dennis Drainville arrived at the county office on Friday with a message that was music to everyone's ears: The province has agreed to spend $2.3-million to provide up to 30 chronic care beds in the county. Looking on in the background are Dennis Ference, manager of the Community Health and Support Services office in Peterborough, and program supervisor Alan Cavell.

Minden must improve facility to keep courts

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

To protect local court services, it's up to Anson, Hindon and Minden to bring the present facilities up to provincial standards, says MPP Dennis Drainville.

"The main problem is not the number of days court is held in Minden, but the physical reality of the court house," Drainville said Friday afternoon after making the announcement about the county's chronic care beds.

Court is held on the second floor of the municipal building. There is no access for people in wheelchairs, contrary to regulations for provincially-funded institutions. As well there are no holding cells and the court, which also serves as the council chambers, is a security risk.

"When that is changed it will be a different story," Drainville says. "I believe once we've dealt with that issue we will solve the problem. Our court system is not in jeopardy."

Council has until December 31, 1992, when the lease expires, to provide adequate facilities.

Minden Reeve Bern Berry was alarmed when half of the weekly court days were switched to Lindsay. He saw this as the beginning of the end of court services in Minden, which is the county seat.

"We've been taking a knocking and not entirely fairly," Drainville said in response.

It was intended that only those cases involving out-of-county residents — a tourist charged with impaired driving, for instance — would be tried in Lindsay to make it more convenient for the accused. If witnesses were local, then the case would still be heard in Minden.

But the people making the decisions are primarily based in Lindsay. At the informal press conference Friday — standing on the steps leading to the county office — the editor of the Minden Times quoted the crown attorney as saying that with some cases being heard in Lindsay, there are no longer enough cases to justify court in Minden.

Local men badly injured in Eagle Lake accident

by MARK PUBLICOVER
Staff Reporter

Three Haliburton men suffered major injuries after the truck they were in swerved to miss a deer and overturned onto a rock on Eagle Lake Road.

Dysart fire department volunteers arrived at the scene just after 6 a.m. Wednesday morning and helped transport the three men to Haliburton Hospital.

Driver Bill Stamp of Haliburton and passengers Joe Bush of Eagle Lake and Tim Brannigan of Haliburton, all in their thirties, were all injured.

Stamp has a crushed vertebrae and is in Haliburton Hospital. Bush was transported to St. Joseph's in Peterborough, suffering from a crushed knee and broken arm.

As of Sunday, Brannigan was still in intensive care at St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto. He has multiple internal injuries and extensive damage to his leg.

The three men had been together in Haliburton, heading home shortly after two a.m.. Four hours later, a Bell Canada driver chanced upon Stamp, who flagged him down. They then phoned for the ambulance and the fire department's Jaws of Life.

24-hour helicopter aid now available in Minden

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A helicopter will now be able to land at night at the Minden Hospital thanks to a circle of highly reflective cones.

Until last Friday, helicopters could only land on the flat stretch of land between the hospital and medical centre during daylight hours. Many emergencies happen at night — including the recent murder of a teenager who had to be transported to Lindsay by ambulance — and the cones allow for enhanced services.

No maintenance is required and the cones, which are three times more reflective than regular materials, will remain on the grassy site. The cones are common in Northern Ontario.

The Haliburton County Ambulance Service has been working with the Ministry of Health's air ambulance branch for several months. In early September, Minden Hospital was contacted as one of four night sites for this area, says local manager Tim Masson. He is now helping to survey the southern part of the county for installation of another night site.

The landing site was also a topic of discussion at Wednesday's trustee meeting of St. Joseph's General Hospital. The meeting was held at Hyland Crest in Minden.

It would cost $40,000 to upgrade the temporary landing site at Minden Hospital, said Executive-director Frank Lussing. However, since the recent study on long-term healthcare strategies suggests moving the hospital facilities to the Hyland Crest site, it would be foolish to spend $40,000 to make the hospital landing site permanent.

The Carnarvon murder of teenager Sandy Bannon "did raise the issue of the need for a helipad (operational) all times of day in all weather," said Lussing. The Turner family of Carnarvon, friends of Sandy, has started a fundraising campaign for a permanent site in her honour.

Where to put beds is next

"This kind of local involvement is necessary," says Drainville. "The people of Haliburton County need to make these decisions."

As to the delay of another year before construction can even begin, Drainville said "Much as though I want everything to move quickly, these are very significant decisions affecting a great deal of money. It would be unwise to rush the project. We have to make sure each dollar counts."

When asked why Haliburton is getting the approval for a capital project while the province has put others on hold, the MPP said that our steering plan was one of the first in the province to reflect the new direction of long-term healthcare. In dealing with colleagues and ministry officials, "I stressed how important it was to have a pilot project to see this initiative go forward.

"It fits well into the government's priorities and I've said this over and over and over again to the ministries. In light of the restraint, we are moving forward with significant dollars.

"People deserve these services."

Drainville also announced that a project worker paid by the province "will work with the county for two years to co-ordinate existing programs and to help fit the new services to the county's needs."

As well, the county will receive: $175,000 to fund in-home respite services to provide relief for caregivers; $45,5000 to expand an emergency response service for elderly people; and $40,000 annually to provide attendant care services to physically challenged and frail elderly people. These issues were all identified in the steering plan.

Drainville also said more funds will be forthcoming to honour the housing component of the study.

"It's just fantastic to be given $2.3-million," said Warden Carol Puffer immediately after the announcement. "It's wonder to get some good news. Finally a great need will be filled."

"It's a very challenging and exciting time for the county," said Rheta Jones, Hyland Crest administrator. "To do a quality job we can't do it without the equipment."

Members of the steering committee, who spent 18 months formulating the plan, were not invited to the press conference and so were not available for comment.

Man charged

A Minden man has been charged with criminal negligence causing bodily harm and impaired driving following a single-car accident that injured three people on Aug. 24.

The driver had to be removed from the car by the Minden Fire Dept.'s Jaws of Life and was later air-lifted to Toronto's St. Michael's Hospital. His two passengers were also badly injured.

Emergency visits increase in Haliburton

three hospitals combined, there was an average of 124.3 visits per day, compared to a budgeted average of 110.

But the number of overall patient days is lower than budgeted. There have been 1,178 patient days in Haliburton and 899 at Minden by the end of August, partly because some beds have been closed down.

Meanwhile, Toronto General Hospital is giving the Haliburton Hospital a home dialysis unit for a Haliburton area man who has no running water or hydro at his home. The man has been undergoing dialysis at Toronto General three times a week; it will be less expensive to have him visit the Haliburton Hospital as an outpatient. Toronto General will pay all costs, including those of training a nurse to come in and administer the dialysis.

"This is potentially exciting and potentially troubling," says Lussing. The decision reflects the ministry's policy of keeping people in their homes and out of institutionalized care for as long as possible.

Hwy 121 accident injures three men

Three people were injured when the driver of a car lost control on Hwy. 121 east of Haliburton Saturday night.

James Lemon was driving eastbound when he lost control, went into the ditch and careened back onto the road at about 9:30 p.m. Lemon and his two passengers, Jack Morrison and James O'Neill, both 14, were taken to Haliburton Hospital.

THE CANDIDATES SPEAK OUT ...

Berry wants to see more debate at county council

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Debates must be explored more openly and thoroughly by county council, says a candidate for Anson, Hindon and Minden's reeve seat.

"I'd like to see more debate on the floor and not as much committee work," says Bern Berry. "I'd also like to see my agenda before I walk in that day. How do I know what to research? It doesn't even give you a fighting chance."

Berry has been on county council for six years but only in May, when he was appointed reeve after Ray Moore's heart attack, could he sit on the management committee.

"The 10 reeves sit on management and planning and know the ins and outs of what needs to be done," Berry says. "When it comes to the deputies, there's no conversation left. There are very few debates on the floor of county council."

Berry was one of the councillors who fought to re-open the county's budget after complaints from municipalities that the 35 per cent increase was too high. (For the first time, deputies sat on the committee to draft the budget.) "I wanted to look at it again," he says, adding his interests were the Official Plan, waste management and a few conventions which could be scrapped.

"County council has had a rough time of it. They feel they need things, such as waste management. The province tells us we've got to cut down on the amount of garbage in our landfill sites and bait them with dollars.

"Social services are just wild," partly because the province has increased welfare payments, of which county taxpayers pay 20 per cent.

"As far as the OP goes, it should slow down until the economy picks up. We should look at it to see if it would be an advantage."

Berry says the county hired a planner because it was thought that the seven municipalities without municipal OPs could link up with the county's. They felt lack of an OP was slowing development, but Berry says that doesn't appear to be the case. (Now AHM council wants each municipality to draft its own OP before the county goes ahead with its.)

If the tax coalition wants to help the county keep taxes down, that's fine, Berry says, but the coalition also has to realize money must be spent.

As an example, Berry said a coalition member was at the last county council meeting and didn't realize that the county owns Hyland Crest and pays about 20 per cent of its operating costs. The senior citizens home was built 25 years ago and Berry doubts it would meet the standards of today. It needs a major overhaul to reflect the change in residents from ambulatory to those requiring more nursing care. The average age at the home is now 87.

Other areas need spending as well and "if they look with their blinkers on", opportunities and needs will be missed. Taxes might have been lower before, but "maybe Haliburton County was back behind and now it's starting to catch up."

One of the reasons Berry is running is because of the need for continuity on county council, he says. At least six of the present councillors aren't running and "there should be someone there who was there before."

As well, "I want something meaningful to do." Berry is a retired Metro police officer. Six years ago, he was elected as a councillor but the deputy-reeve, Brendan Berube, never assumed the seat because of possible conflicts with his job. Berry was asked to become deputy. In the 1988 election, his bid for deputy was uncontested.

"My biggest asset is availability to do whatever has to be done," says Berry. "Also I feel the six years I've been there has taught me a lot of things. You can't just read about it, you have to go through the steps and see how it runs. I also have the willingness to do it."

Bern Berry

Berry is facing some stiff opposition. Former reeve Moore is running again, as is Verne Graham, who assumed a council seat after April's shuffle. Former Lutterworth reeve Ron Gambell is also running for reeve.

"I think they're trying to split the vote," Berry says of the competition.

Minden council meetings used to be quite rancorous — Berry and Moore often did not agree. "We haven't gelled as a council and no one's really at fault," Berry says. "Mr. Moore and (councillor and deputy-reeve candidate) Lewis Stevens tended towards more unplanned development. I'm a little more cautious."

Berry also gives credit to fellow councillors for the present lack of arguments. "Council meetings are shorter and we're getting more done. We have differences of opinions but we don't bicker."

Ray Moore is back and ready to run for reeve

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Even a heart attack can't keep Ray Moore away from his beloved politics.

"I had a lot of people say 'run, run, run'," the former reeve of Anson, Hindon and Minden says of his decision to make a bid for the seat again. "I'm very people oriented, I like council and I'm feeling good. I went to the doctor to ask if I should run and he signed my nomination papers."

Early this spring, Moore was in Florida when he had a heart attack and underwent by-pass surgery. One culprit was cigarettes — he was smoking up to three packs a day but hasn't smoked since — but to observers of council meetings, Moore was also often stressed by the arguments.

"Stress is something I've always had and I seem to work better under stress," he responds. "If you think you know all the answers, that's when you sometimes blow it."

He admits that personality conflicts had a lot to do with the problems among councillors. "In my six years on Gravenhurst, we never had a council as tough as the one I had here. If you know the background of how things worked out, I did not bring (the conflicts) out."

There was also the controversy of Moore's residential condominium development. In 1988, Moore won the reeve's seat. Shortly afterwards, he faced opposition from neighbours and councillors who had concerns about his development at Newcastle and St. Germain Streets. Eventually Moore shelved the project. He was also involved at first with a plan to develop a residential neighbourhood on a hill behind the hardware store.

"That controversy was a perception of two police officers and they originated it," Moore says. (Councillors Bern Berry and Mike Maher are retired police officers.) "There was nothing to it, there was nothing in the background.

"If you look into your history, your reeves were the ones who did things in the community. People in council are (sometimes there) to line their own pockets but Ray Moore was never one of them. But all you need is innuendo to make someone out to be a crook.

"The conflict of interest rules are one of the most important pieces of legislation we have. It's to stop people from abusing their positions. When I was on council in Gravenhurst, the mayor was in real estate but we all understood (when he declared conflicts) and he didn't get any advantage out of it."

Moore and his family own several Jug City stores, including the ones in Minden and Haliburton. He says his wife Gloria would rather spend the entire winter in Florida but supports his decision to run again.

"I'm happiest when I've done something for somebody," Moore says, and being reeve is his way of contributing to the municipality. "It's very hard to understand Ray Moore. I'm a real complicated person — I can be a real rough bugger but I love people. . . I know that Ray Moore can do a good job."

Moore says he got along well with his fellow county councillors and although he was ill when the county drafted its 35 per cent budget increase, he says he supports their decision, even though at the municipal level he was fighting for a zero-based budget.

"I think everything that was being done (in the county budget) was because past councils forced them into it. Past councils always said 'We'll let the government do it.' That kind of attitude gets you in trouble. If you don't do these things it's going to catch up with you."

There are four declared candidates for reeve so far: Moore, Bern Berry, Verne Graham and Ron Gambell.

Business needs stronger voice at AHM: Gambell

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

People who want to see Anson, Hindon and Minden move ahead need a stronger voice on council, says a Minden businessman who's running for reeve.

"I feel business people need a partner on council and I just don't feel they have it," says Ron Gambell about why he's decided to return to the political fray. "I'm needed to bring harmony between the business people and the council. . .

"The tax base must be broadened by businesses, which already provide the majority of taxes. Unfortunately, a lot of people don't understand how this works.

"I think if anyone that has land, whether on a lake or in the village, if it conforms to all the by-laws, why should you stop development? I don't think you can stop it."

One business that definitely needs to be helped is the Chamber of Commerce. When Gambell was on county council — he was elected to Lutterworth council first in 1976, became deputy-reeve in 1977 and was reeve from 1979 to 1985 — "I was the one who originally got them the large increase," he says. The grant increased from several thousand dollars to approximately $60,000.

"I'm a firm believer in doing what we do well and tourism is our thing and the Chamber should be look at," he says between dealing with customers at his store, Gambell's Antiques.

Problems with the Chamber in the past have always amounted to a personality clash. "I hate it — I don't have time for it," he says of the bickering. Gambell hopes with the Chamber's upcoming election, quality people will put their names forward so the Chamber and county council can work together to promote the Highlands.

As well, on county council Gambell says he will work for the betterment of the entire county, not just Minden's parochial interests.

Gambell, who is presently president of the Minden Rotary Club, says it will take him two terms in office to achieve his goals and maintain continuity. "I'm not going to dwell on the past and what we've lost. We're going to build on what we have."

When asked about the county issue of amalgamation, he says "it has to be done and we are better to do it ourselves rather than let Queen's Park do it for us. Some people don't like it but it gets down to economics. We can't afford that much government."

On economic development and the official plan, both of which were issues when he was on county council, he wants to reserve judgement until he gets a first-hand look of what's happening today. He does believe in hiring good people and letting them do the job.

"I know I can do the job," he says, summarizing his platform. "I want to move the town ahead and it's up to the voters to decide whether I will."

There are four declared candidates for reeve so far: Gambell, Bern Berry, Ray Moore and Verne Graham.

Stevens speaks out when issues warrant

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Lewis Stevens doesn't talk a lot at Anson, Hindon and Minden council meetings, but as a candidate for the deputy-reeve seat, he's got plenty to say.

From community policing to the county's Official Plan, Stevens says he ideas which will help the municipality and county.

"It definitely takes three years to feel comfortable with the format that goes along with council administration and to be aware of the system so you can be effective and get a self assurance," says Lewis, who was first elected as a councillor in 1988. Sometimes he is quiet on council, but only when he agrees with what's being done, he says. "If I don't agree with the general flow I am adamant in my own decisions. I have to feel comfortable with myself, that that's exactly what I wanted to do."

Stevens is a "major player" in the Heritage Plaza area on Highway 35. As a business man, and on council being seen as pro development, he understands the needs and aspirations of people who want the municipality to move ahead.

Tourism, or "rest and relaxation" is our number one industry and there's nothing to stop that from continuing. "Complementing this is the attractiveness of the area to our senior citizens, demanding no jobs but requiring the fulfillment of their needs, services and considerations.

"Unfortunately, the downfall in our economic development is we cannot fulfill the needs of our young adults. . . We cannot give them the assurance of full employment, addressing their ambitions and guaranteeing an aggressive and satisfying career in our area."

The municipality has to analyze the problem and "new avenues" must be explored. Getting small industries to locate here is a dream which will probably never be realized.

Stevens says the problem-ridden Chamber of Commerce needs to be more innovative. "We still think of it as a tourist association and while it's good and functional as that. . . they need to build up the economy. The Chamber has to look at everything that improves the area."

on a fee-for-service basis. He also doesn't agree with the direction the plan seems to be taking now. "It looks as if they're trying to fit everyone into one plan that fits all.

"The cost is a thing I'm sure has gone out of everyone's imaginations. Eventually, the rules and regulations coming from this bureaucracy will be dams everyone has to overcome.

"What Mr. Stagg has to prove to us is he can fulfill the needs of the municipality and the municipality has to give him the go ahead to work with us. There's no reason we can't try to see how he'd

Teachers sponsor a meeting for trustees

Even though the Haliburton County Board of Education accounts for almost two-thirds of property tax revenue, the election of school board trustees often gets little attention.

County teachers want that to change with the November 12 election.

On November 6 and 7, the Haliburton County Women Teachers' Association is sponsoring two public meetings with trustee candidates.

"We feel it's really important that the public has an informed vote and are aware of where the candidates stand," says Debbie Wales, a member of the organizing committee.

One problem, she says, is many people don't know who their trustee is. As well, many trustees get in by acclamation because it's difficult to get people to run.

The question-the-candidates evenings are November 6 at the library of J.Douglas Hodgson Elementary School in Haliburton and November 7 at the Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden. Time for both meetings is 7:30 p.m.

The teachers will also be sending a questionnaire to each candidate. The results will be published the week before the election.

See next week's Echo for a complete list of the candidates for local councils and the school board.

Store owner runs for Ward 1 seat on Dysart council

by LEN PIZZEY
Publisher

Although she's making her first bid to serve on Dysart et al council, Lori Bonfield is no stranger to local politics. Her uncle, Roy Brohm, was one of the county's most distinguished municipal politicians, and Bonfield says she shares the same interest in and commitment to the community that marked Roy Brohm's many terms on council.

Having owned Country Pickin's clothing store on Haliburton's main street for the past 10 years, Bonfield believes her grasp of local concerns would serve her well as a councillor for Ward 1, an area that encompasses Haliburton village.

"I've always been involved in the community," Bonfield says, "having lived in Ward 1 all my life, and having run a business."

She has served on the board of the Haliburton Business Improvement Area Association, worked with the Horiticultural Society, and was principal organizer of the annual Spring Fling festivals. "The only thing I won't promise is no rain on May 24!" she jokes, referring to the downpours that put a damper on successive Spring Flings and forced the event to be abandoned.

"I think I have the same cares and concerns as anybody else," Bonfield says. "You want a safe, healthy place for your kids to grow up in."

"I have always had a lot of pride in this little community."

Bonfield believes that one of the key challenges facing council, and the wider community, is to protect and preserve the qualities that make Haliburton appealing to cottagers and tourists, while at the same time facilitating economic growth. With the growing concern over the tax burden, and the pain of the recession, Bonfield believes the community needs to reassess its strengths and concentrate on enhancing them.

To that end, expansion and upgrading of Haliburton's sewage plant is essential, Bonfield says. She praises the efforts of previous council in trying to get the project off the ground, and hopes the next council can tackle the problem with renewed vigour.

"We really should have the sewage system. You don't work on something for nine years and not mean it."

As a first time candidate for a seat on council, Bonfield knows a lot of hard work lies ahead.

Laurie Bonfield

"I don't intend to try to to have an answer for every question," she says. "I certainly have a lot of research to do into the issues."

At the same time, she believes in dealing with problems as they arise, and not deferring a decision. And since she owns and operates a main street business, she'll be accessible to people who want to discuss community issues and concerns.

"I'm not one to put things on the back shelf," she says. "I just want to be able to deal with the issues honestly and fairly, and do whatever I can to make sure people are satisfied."

To date, Bonfield is the only candidate for the Ward 1 seat that has been held by Bob Nichol. Nichol is running for deputy reeve this time around.

Tupling makes first bid for Dysart Ward 5

by MARK PUBLICOVER
Staff Reporter

Add Haliburton Lake's Larry Tupling to the list of candidates for council in Dysart.

The former government health and safety inspector wants to bring his political knowledge and experience with groups and clubs as a councillor in Ward 5.

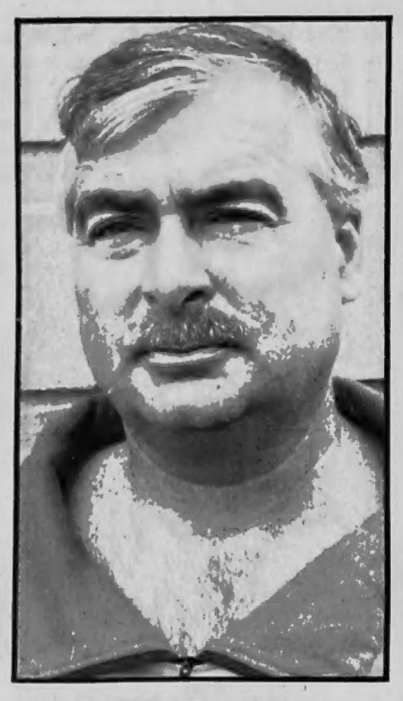
"I have nothing personal to gain but lots of time and effort to give," he told The Echo. "Meetings require a lot of time and I feel I can devote 100 per cent to whatever would be required."

Now an independent businessman, Tupling owns and operates Merling Developments with a partner doing building jobs, road maintenance and snow removal.

He moved to Haliburton seven years ago as a cottager while he worked for the Ministry of Labour, where he worked for 10 years.

"If you don't learn something about politics in 10 years of government service, you never will."

He has been involved with numerous clubs in Haliburton and Orillia, as he has served as the president of the Orillia Golf Club (men's section), Orillia Figure Skating Club, and the Orillia Men's Recreational Softball League.



Larry Tupling

He is currently the vice-president of the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association, is the past president of the Haliburton Lake Cottager's Association, belongs to the newly-formed Haliburton County Search and Rescue Team and has served for five years with the Orillia Volunteer Fire Department.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION '91

He feels an in-depth look into the market-value assessment proposal along with how taxes are spent is needed in the municipality.

"Everyone knows that taxes are a necessary evil and must be collected to makes things function but priority must be given to how and where they are spent."

Tupling thinks seasonal residents are important to the area's economy and feels they should be given a break in school taxes. Seniors and retirees, he said, should also be given some relief in this area as they have paid their fair share.

Other issues affecting Ward 5 that Tupling would like to devote time to include water levels, road conditions and local dumps.

"I realize that the Ministry of the Environment has control over landfill areas but as a resident and a councillor, I would fight to keep the dumps open as often as required to satisfy demand," he said. He also realizes that keeping them open too much could result in unnecessary expense to the municipality.

Earl MacDuff will listen in Glamorgan

by MARK PUBLICOVER
Staff Reporter

Earl MacDuff wants to listen.

He wants to listen as a councillor for Glamorgan Township.

The retired life insurance salesman said he's tired of getting complaints that council doesn't listen to residents and pledges to change that.

"Now that I've retired, I've got the time to listen," he said in an interview. "I want to learn more about municipal affairs and be available to all taxpayers and residents if they have any questions, to answer them or find the answer regardless of when or where I am."

Born and raised in Gooderham, MacDuff said he's walked over every inch of Glamorgan but his interests lie more with its residents than with its land.

"I want to see why things are run the way they are and I want to address our situation.

"Let's get him out of the office and into the field. We need the guidance and interpretation he is qualified to supply."

On market value re-assessment, Stevens says "everyone has to have a fair deal. If you find out that somebody is enjoying an assessment that hasn't been updated for many years, I think they themselves would want to be assured they're obligated for their fair share so they can enjoy the lifestyle they expect. We're not gouging visitors just because they can afford to have a cottage.

"I'm sure they would want to be the first to say 'we want to pay our fair share but we don't want you to take advantage that we have the ability to come up here through the hard work we've generated in the city.'"

Lewis welcomes the tax coalition. "This group will be as effective as the type of directors who come forward with both concerns and ability. I can only see council meetings becoming more effective and business-like, being aware of their presence."

The coalition should focus its energies on education, "working with our trustees, not as political bashing, but with constructive criticism that will be invaluable."

One issue near to his heart is community policing, something he fought for and encouraged as a way of bringing the business community, residents and police closer together. By working in partnership, people can feel more secure and the police would have the assurance they're meeting the community's needs.

"The police want to feel good in their own minds. They need really good insight into what the public expects. If there's co-operation between the two, each would know the other's needs."

So far, Stevens is uncontested for the deputy-reeve position.

The business of Dysart et al prompts Jerry Walker to run

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

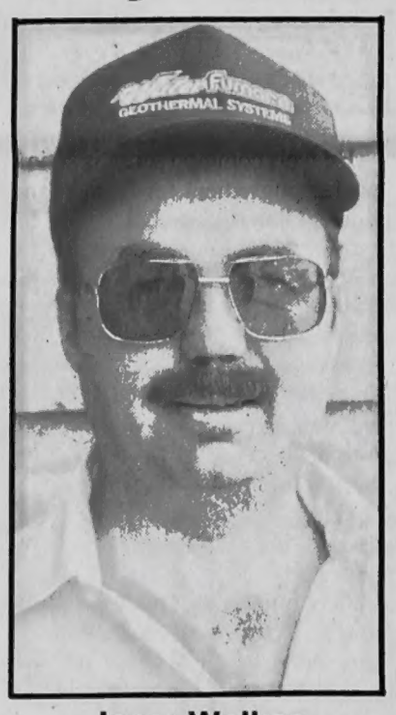
Jerry Walker wants to put his business acumen to work for Dysart et al.

"If you can get it you can spend it; if you don't, you can't," says the owner of Walker's Heating and Cooling who's running to represent Ward 2. (Ward 2 is the first tier surrounding Haliburton Village.)

This business philosophy can also work for the municipality, he says. An as an example, the use and protection of our environment concerns everyone, but "we still have to stay within budget" when devising the best course of action.

"We need a happy medium. Everyone has to be recycling but we can't just run out and put other things aside."

The municipality also needs new businesses. "I'd like to see steady growth as long as it's approached cautiously," he says. "Our community needs growth to survive."



Jerry Walker

A strong Chamber of Commerce will help and although he won't be on county council, which provides much of the funding, Walker says municipal politicians can be involved in finding a way to make it work.

Walker has a lot of faith in the community's future, and he lays part of the credit on newcomers and cottagers. "It's a small town atmosphere with big city connections. You can see how fortunate we are from mixing the two. Our community works on cottagers. They own property here and contribute as much as local people through taxes and supporting community projects."

More openness needed in Glamorgan: MacDuff

by MARK PUBLICOVER
Staff Reporter

Gooderham's Beverly MacDuff wants to see a more open, fair an responsible council in Glamorgan township and if she gets her way, she'll get a chance to have one because she'll be its reeve.

"There's got to be a change," MacDuff told The Echo. "There's a desperate need for a more open and responsive council — we owe residents the openness they deserve."

A member of Glamorgan council since a by-election in February, 1990, MacDuff was upset with the township's decision to implement full-market value assessment last year and feels that the public was not consulted enough during the process.

"Council should have asked for more involvement," she said. "I believe that many residents didn't even know we were considering it."

She was the only person on the five-member council who opposed its implementation.

"I had to do what my conscience told me. There should have been more consideration as to its impact."

Beverly MacDuff running for reeve in Glamorgan

MUNICIPAL ELECTION '91

MacDuff feels Glamorgan needs some new blood and that her education, experience and versatility should give her a good shot at the reeve seat.

Originally from Toronto, MacDuff has lived in Gooderham for the past 21 years. She received her municipal administration certificate from McMaster University in Hamilton and belongs to the Association of Municipal Clerk-Treasurers of Ontario (AMCTO).

She worked for the township for two-and-a-half years as assistant clerk and has experience with budgets, payrolls and program design.

She was disappointed with the council's lack of openness and felt that the township's school board trustee, Craig Pettit, should have been invited to sit with council more often.

"I think there was a lack of public participation in general," she said. "We should have asked for more of (Pettit's) involvement because he represents our municipality as well."

Walker promises open mind on issues

Walker can understand cottagers' trepidation about the possible introduction of 1988 property values for assessment. "My basic feeling is if we own property we have to be assessed accordingly but I'd want a happy medium. I'm not totally happy with market value reassessment."

He says he'll approach such issues with an open mind. "I'd like to listen to people and put the facts together before making a decision. If I can live with my decision, I'll be happy."

This is Walker's first foray into municipal politics but he has helped the former councillor, John Parish, with his campaigns. A snowmobiler, hunter, fisherman, volunteer fireman and Rotarian, Walker has developed a lot of roots in the community since moving here in 1977 with his wife Dale. His business employs four to six people a year and he can understand people who say it's much tougher to get buy. Both consumers and business people "are getting hit from every angle."

"I am going to do whatever I can to make things fair for everyone. I'm definitely not promising miracles and I don't think I should," he says of his overall campaign approach. "I'm just interested in what goes on in the community."

Fairness an issue for MacDuff

deal with anything and everything that looks unfair or unjustified."

MacDuff devotes much of his time to social work, particularly in the area of alcoholism. He speaks about the disease at clubs and his treatment of the subject has made him a popular speaker with high school students in Lindsay and Haliburton.

He feels common sense is an important ingredient for council and thinks Glamorgan could use a bit more of it.

"People have been neglected for too long. The market value assessment issue should have been explained to everyone," he said. "Council should have sent a letter or something, but nothing like that was done."

Market Value Assessment a major issue, says Heinze

by LEN PIZZEY
Publisher

Robert Heinze believes Market Value Assessement will be a major issue in the next term of Dysart et al council. And as a candidate for Ward 5, encompassing one of the municipality's major cottaging areas, he wants to carry constituents' opposition to MVA to the council table.

"I know most of Ward 5 is dead against (MVA), and I want to have that input on their behalf", said Heinze, who is making his first bid for a seat on Dysart council.

A real estate salesman with the ReMax Haliburton Highlands organization and a resident of Haliburton Lake, Heinze says he is particularly sensitive to conflict of interest. For that reason, he would not want to serve on the municipality's planning board.

"It would be pointless to agree to sit on the planning board and then have to abstain every time a possible conflict of interest arose," he said.

"The planning board is extremely important, especially in view of some of the tough decisions that lie ahead for our municipality. Frankly, I'd like to see its makeup changed to consist of two councillors plus three seperately appointed member of the public." (The board is presently comprised of members of council).

Robert Heinze seeks Ward 5 seat

"People are feeling shut out of the political process. I think it's time we called on them to get involved," said Heinze.

There is a two-man race in Ward 5, with Heinze facing a challenge from Larry Tupling, another first time candidate for local political office.

Heinze is urging everyone, especialliy cottage owners, to get out and cast a ballot in the municipal election. The advance poll in November 2 at the Dysart municipal office provides an opportunity for seasonal residents to express their choice.

"The opportunity to be heard is there. People should use it," said Heinze.

Arts school adds sixth week

Sir Sandford Fleming College is expanding its School of Fine Arts to six weeks next summer, the school's principal told The Echo.

"We've come to an agreement with the Board of Education and there will be some extra rooms at the high school we can use for a sixth week," Barb Bolin says.

The popular program has experienced steady growth in its 25-year history and Bolin expects an increase of about 200 people in the coming year. Over 2,000 were enrolled in 1991.

The school will run from June 29 to August 7.

A cautious hurrah

On first reading, the province and MPP Dennis Drainville have finally delivered some wonderful news: $2.3-million has been allocated to build the county's first long-term care facilities. In this time of restraint, when other capital projects are being put on hold, we have Drainville to thank for this. No one doubts he's expended a great deal of energy and politicking on our behalf, and nothing can diminish his — and former MPP John Eakins' — contributions. His job was to remind Queen's Park of a promise made by both the NDP and Liberal governments: When the recently-completed study on the county's healthcare needs reinforced the need for chronic care beds — after spending 18 months and $80,000 on consultants' fees alone to say what residents have been saying for free all along — then nothing would stand in our way of getting those beds. That's what Drainville and Premier Bob Rae said in election speeches and that's what former health minister Elinor Caplan said when she put funding on hold two years ago. So really, we're just getting what we deserve.

Unfortunately, with this issue at least, Haliburtonians have been taught that promises are made to be broken. Consider this: two years ago, after $400,000 had already been spent devising and approving plans for an 18-bed unit at Haliburton Hospital, the projected cost of the unit was $4-million. Now, the province says its generous gift of $2.3-million will pay the capital costs for up to 30 beds. Is this what they call new math? It would be criminal and a waste of taxpayers' dollars not to go ahead with the plans for the Haliburton unit, which still reflects the government's wishes for comprehensive healthcare services. The plans are tender-ready — all they need is an ad in the paper to say "How much am I bid?" The people of this county — east and west, north and south, seasonal and permanent — gladly raised more than $400,000 with this project in mind so there's no doubt they support it.

But the steering committee report is a bit foxy. It recommends construction of 40 beds, but gives four options, basically splitting the beds between Haliburton and Minden villages. (A hospital on the Allsaw Flats will never be more than a dream motivated by political manoeuverings.) Although many people laugh at the competition between the two villages, it would be foolish to ignore that this opens up a potential battle. For instance, it may be a mute point but the study, in an apparent bias towards Minden, says that it takes only five minutes longer to drive from Kennisis Lake to the Minden Hospital than it would to drive to the Haliburton Hospital. Ambulance drivers and common sense dispute this.

This doesn't mean Minden doesn't deserve a share of the province's largesse. When the 18-bed unit was being planned, one reason Haliburton was chosen was because the Minden Hospital is made of wood and there's therefore more risk of fire. More recently, a letter from the Ministry of Health says "the Community Health and Support Services Division proposes to continue working with Hyland Crest to redevelop the facility and its services. This planning should be done in conjunction with the review of the Minden hospital site. For example, the Minden Hospital and Hyland Crest could be integrated in the future."

The press release for the announcement of $2.3-million for capital costs says the money can be used for up to three projects: renovations to support ambulatory and diagnostic services at Haliburton Hospital; up to 30 beds in the county; and in essence, a feasibility study about moving the Minden Hospital to Hyland Crest. There is no feasible way the money can be used to build two major projects, especially when the new dining hall at Bark Lake Leadership Camp cost $1-million (a project which many local residents would gladly have done without if it had really been a matter of community priorities.)

Let's take the $2.3-million, run with it and out-fox the foxes by building the 18 beds in Haliburton. Then let's rally together to get Minden the healthcare services it so justly deserves.

Political double talk must stop

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

It appears that another round of constitutional debate is about to begin. And again, it seems the future of Quebec within Canada is the major issue. While the opinion of most people outside Quebec could be summed up as "no special deals for Quebec", the experts offer their latest version of the "distinct society" clause.

Nobody who has ever been to Quebec could argue that "la belle province" is quite distinct from any other. Quebec's special character is not an issue; deliberately putting a vague term like "distinct society" in the Constitution should be.

Ottawa spends half its time telling the rest of Canada that "distinct society" doesn't really promise anything and that merely including the phrase as window dressing will satisfy the aspirations of Quebec. Meanwhile, Ottawa tells Quebec that the clause gives them the power they need. All the while, Quebec politicians are screaming that the "distinct society" clause isn't strong enough. They seem to see its inclusion in the Constitution as a starting point for further debate.

So, what does "distinct society" mean and why is it necessary to include it? Is it just a formal recognition of historic fact for Quebec or is it a political riddle to be forever debated by the Supreme Court of Canada? It cannot be bot. Is it the end of a journey or the beginning of a new one?

Listen to the debate on Quebec's sign law hinge on the "notwithstanding" clause and it is easy to see how ambiguous terms can be twisted to suit one's own purpose. Any "distinct society" reference in the Constitution must be openly debated to avoid any unintended results in future. Sweeping this issue under the rug as politically incorrect debate will only come back to haunt Canada's future. This double talk must stop.

Is Quebec a) one of two equal partners in Confederation (French and English); b) a favourite son with a special deal; c) one of ten equal provinces.

Ottawa and Quebec seem to believe (a). Most Canadians outside Quebec would choose (b). And surely (c) is the only route to renewed confederation and a workable future for Canada.

Sticking it to seniors

To the Editor:

After reading the points of view page in your newspaper and reading Harvey Clarke's comments on sticking it to the snowbirds, I must say I agree with just about all his write up. I might add that the N.D.P. Government gave the private insurance companies another windfall as far as raising their premiums. And I have wrote to Dennis Drainville, the Premier, and the Ministry of Health.

I would like to inform your staff reporter that wherever he got his info that O.H.I.P. currently pays all hospital costs incurred by travellers out of the country, that is not really right — not when you go to the U.S.A. anyway. My wife was sick in Florida last year and hospitalized and we know O.H.I.P. did not or does not pay for all of the hospital bill only a percentage of it and some cases a small percentage at that. Also the Dr. bills are the same.

THE THANKSGIVING WEEKEND is coming up and once again thousands of people will be streaming into the Highlands of Haliburton for three full days of sports, shopping, yard sales and of course taking time out to close up the cottage and eat plenty of turkey in their spare time. This weekend will also be the time for the cottagers to come out to town and say hello to their local friends who in many cases will be getting ready to head south for the winter months. After this weekend it will be time to look forward and face the business at hand, and that includes, among many other things, winter sports. Hockey, curling and figure skating are underway at most Haliburton County arenas and we'll have to wait awhile longer for snow that will bring along with it skiing and snowmobiling. It's certainly no secret that we are in a bad recession and we'll need plenty of snow during the winter months to help out with this sluggish economy. Let it snow, let it snow, let it snow.

The Victoria-Haliburton Concerns Committee for Alcohol and Drug Awareness will hold its sixth Annual Seminar on October 23 at the Ontario Government Building, 322 Kent St., W., Lindsay, Ontario. At a time when public concern is at an all-time high, the committee has planned a most informative program. Not only is it educational but a day of deep understanding, optimism and good fellowship. The theme is "Addiction plus Action equals hope." They are delighted to have Dr. M. Bloudoff and the renowned therapist Doug Smith both of Toronto, plus a panel on "Where Is Our Help?" This Victoria-Haliburton Concerns Committee is not funded by any Government grants. It is supported solely by local service clubs, industries and by private individuals. Registration fees: $25 agencies, professionals etc.; $15 students, seniors, homemakers etc. You are asked to please register by October 14th to guarantee lunch.

Just recently a group of ladies in Irondale donated a quilt to the Haliburton Hospital Auxiliary. The members of the Auxiliary are planning to sell ticket son the quilt in an effort to raise money to purchase a new X-Ray machine for the hospital. Donations from local service clubs and organizations would certainly be appreciated as their goal is $100,000.

Up to this point, the month of October has supplied us with some wet weather along with some sunny days. If the weatherman co-operates, you will still have the opportunity to drop down to Head Lake Park to enjoy your lunch, and take in some sun. But through it all we must keep in mind that Christmas is just a little over two months away, and this means that old man winter can't be far away.

Agri-food week is a week to help the consumer become more aware of where their food comes from besides the supermarket shelf. It is a week to be thankful that here in Ontario we still have an abundance of good food. It is to encourage people to buy locally grown produce. Ask for products from Ontario, ask if the meat is from the U.S. and shipped into Canada and stamped with a Canadian stamp. Ask why we can't have good Canadian lamb in the stores and in restaurants rather than products from other countries. Find out why many farmers have to work at two jobs to keep their farms. Farmers don't want to inconvenience people by withholding their products, they won't go on strike, they work 7 days a week feeding their animals and doing their chores. They don't have two weeks paid summer holidays and trips in the winter unless they can pay someone to do their chores. This year many farmers have spent more planting their crops than they have received back in the harvest due to the very dry season. Many farmers are having to draw water for their livestock. Many people love the land and nature and like to farm but are finding it more difficult all the time due to the rising expense of every product they have to buy. During Agri-Food week come out to Lindsay Square Mall on oct. 11th and 12th to see some of the demonstrations and talk to local producers. Canada is second only to the U.S. in low priced quality food. Let's celebrate the good quality food produced in our own area. Keep in mind that Agri-Food week is October 6-12.

Milestones that come and go

THE OTHER NIGHT I was reading a column in the paper about children's books — the one in question being speculation about what the tooth fairy does with all those teeth she gets...

Needless to say, it took me back to the days when our children were losing their baby teeth, and the fact that the younger ones envied those old enough to be putting theirs under the pillow for nickles and dimes.

I think by the time the youngest was losing hers, the fairy was getting up to the quarter stage. Today, I understand they sell little containers for the teeth to go in to be put under the pillow! And I gather a loony would be the minimum acceptable donation...

In fact, the article ended with the comment that the author's child had requested the fairy boost the amount by at least enough to cover the increase in cost of things the child might buy, caused by the GST. Kid'll probably grow up to be a union negotiator...

But thinking about the tooth fairy really made me think about the milestones in life — some of which, I'm afraid are also seen by many as millstones, (fortieth birthdays come to mind).

I guess some milestones are seen from the outside by your parents, like the first word or fist step, while others are seen from the inside, and I would think that that first lost baby tooth is one early memorable event for a child.

Not long after that it's the first day of school, closely followed by the first puppylove crush on someone of the opposite sex, and before you know it it's high school, learning to drive, your first prom, and suddenly you're considered an adult...

Most of today's generation is unlikely to be able to relate to many of the things that stick in the mind of someone from my own time — my first newspaper route, first 'after 4 and Saturday' part-time job.

Or the first promotion in Army Cadets, (something some Haliburton kids can relate to), first trip inside a pool hall (I was 16 when you had to be 18) and into a men's beverage room (I was 18 when you had to be 21).

You met some interesting people in cadets in those days, but not necessarily good influences. Keeping in mind, of course, that these were the war years, and younger people were doing many things they had never done before — including dying...

There are mini-milestones and major milestones, I guess, and as you get older they have to be bigger to have any impact. Like a new grandchild, or even a new car or motorhome.

For me, I'm pleased that the fact that this is the beginning of the seventh year for The view from here still feels like a milestone to me.

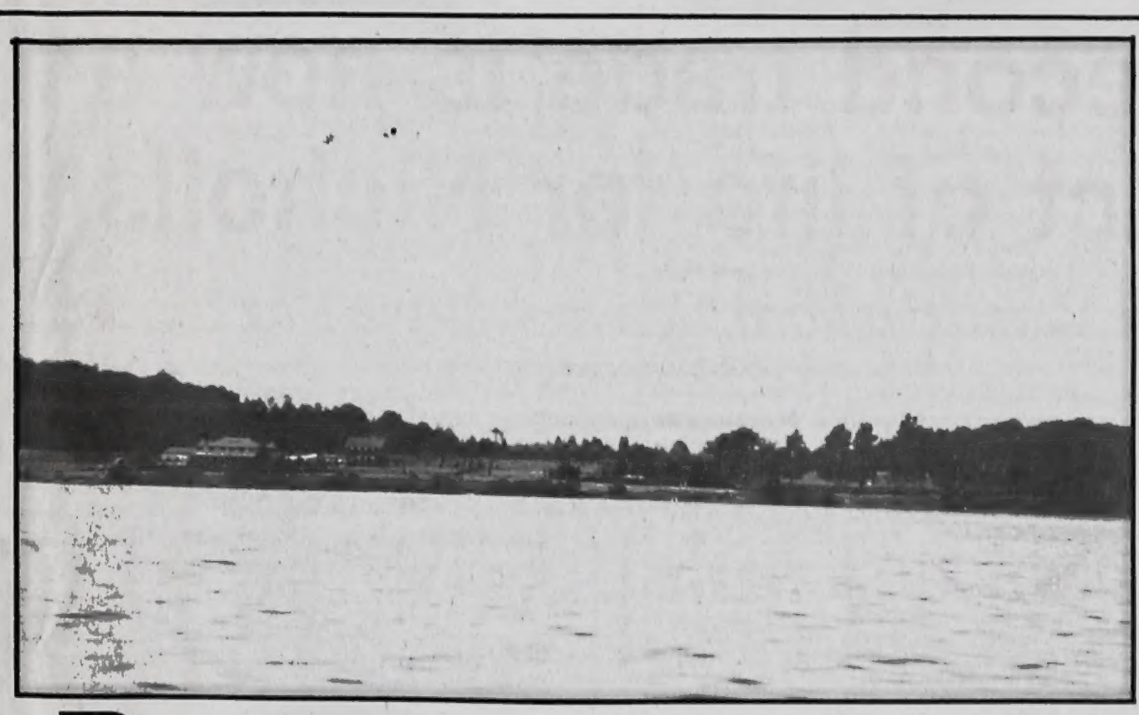
Six years ago tomorrow, the first column ran, a discussion of the whys and wherefores of the great tuna scandal of the day. In the fullness of time, it seems such a small episode in the current government's foibles — and so very long ago... Looking back to those early days, we were discussing pop cans and litter even then (still no deposit required), hockey violence (gave up watching — and worrying — about that one).

There were columns about puns (and my wife thinks I should apologize for last week's — I didn't know that koalas were dying left and right from herpes!) — and, yes, even a few about a new wing for the Haliburton Hospital that I suppose will also remain in the unsolved area along with pop can litter and hockey goons.

Our publisher and editor have continued with their "hands off' policy and allowed me to write on any and all topics for the six years — the one agreed exception being to ignore the fact that I was in the collectibles business, and I did.

Now that I'm out of it, I can say that one of the pleasures of having had this summer business was the fact that I got to meet so many of my readers face to face, and I would like to thank them for their encouragement to keep on sharing my views through this column...

I guess the sensible thing to do with any milestone is just to pass it — and keep on going...



PIC OF THE PAST

Full employment eases unrest area.

I therefore challenge his government to consider the implementation of a province-wide industrial and manufacturing project that would as a result create zero unemployment in Ontario for a decade or more.

This proposed project would reduce energy consumption in certain sectors of the transportation industry by over 600 percent and reduce air and water pollution significantly.

And by reducing transportation and energy costs, it would make Canadian products more competitive on home and world markets.

The project would also increase agricultural production in Southern Ontario to the extent that Ontario produce would cost far less on the market in turn reducing imports from American and World markets. Algoma Steel, the trucking industry, cement manufacturers, and many other industries would profit through the proposed project, including tourism.

When UIC benefits expire for over 250,000 unemployed workers beginning the new year, the welfare load will be staggering for Ontario's NDP government and municipal governments as well.

The most important outcome of the project will be the creation of jobs and more jobs if projects two and three are also implemented in the immediate future.

With full employment and economic prosperity, there is less discontentment within a society. This would reduce expenditures in the criminal and justice system. People can look forward to a brighter and more exciting future with real and lasting hope.

The solutions to many of the problems facing society are available to us if we really want to act on them. But we can't put off solving these problems to the point where costs and time prevent realistic change.

"The key is to bring people together in a way that is conducive to the open flow of ideas followed up by concrete actions," Drainville concludes.

If the NDP Government is really open to "ideas" and will really follow up with "concrete actions," then I challenge all governments, federal, provincial and even municipal, to respond and "act" accordingly.

Having fun down on the farm

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

CLEANING EGGS is one of the more tedious chores on this hobby farm of ours. So I like to have some kind of distraction. Usually I play a Michael Jones or a Brent Titcomb tape, either of which tend to relax me while checking for cracks. But Barb, Ed's boss, loaned us a couple of tapes she thought we'd get a kick out of. As I was familiar with the story, I knew they would be an enjoyable diversion.

They were the Rod Beattie, one-man stage play called Letters From Wingfield Farm. In fact, I have the book. After all it is the story of a man leaving his high-paying, big city job to live a better, more natural life on an old farm in Ontario. There are some parallels here.

Well, no, Ed's wages never hit the six figure mark. And our piece of earth is somewhat smaller than a hundred acres. It's about five and a half, I think. but the concept is similar. Except that we never managed to get a hold of any old race horses to pull the old single furrow plow we dug out from under the rotting straw in the fallen down barn that we rebuilt. To be honest, though we have also dug up many ancient harrow and seeder parts here and there, I don't believe we've actually accumulated one whole piece of equipment yet. But they do make excellent conversational lawn ornaments if we can keep the sculpturers from 'finding parts of these objects' to create roosters and crabs and such.

All right, we had no apple orchard either. We tried, but of the two trees we planted, Ed snowplowed one the first winter. The other, lost and alone, refused to pollinate with the crab apple trees next door, until this last spring, when the one surviving main branch was full of blossoms, ultimately producing seven small northern spy apples that were immediately occupied by worms.

I guess maybe the only similarity between us and the fictitious Mr. Wingfield is the lofty set of ideals we came here with, and the knowing smiles of the kindly patient neighbours who have obviously been taught that experience is the best teacher. That, or they needed a good laugh.

We've now had ten years of experience. Some more instructional than pleasant. And, after all, we're still here with our organic garden and our chickens. Ten years older, a bit wiser, but most of our ideals are intact.

I gotta tell you, though, we really felt a kinship with Mr. Wingfield. Ed came home to find me standing over the eggs, cracking-up, so to speak. We re-played the tape he had missed, and howled our way through it as well as the second one. If it's that funny on tape, it's got to be an aisle roller with Rod Beattie on stage, in person. You know, he's coming to perform the marvelous play for us on November 17, at the Legion. You've got to see it, but bring your hankies, cause you're going to end up crying with laughter.

NDP Algonquin policy is folly

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

by: SHAWN HAGERMAN

N.D.P. MINISTER OF Natural Resources, Bud Wildman, is playing a dangerous game with one of Ontario's largest and must prized assets, Algonquin Park. For almost 100 years, the province has made this an international symbol for the Canadian Wilderness. It has drawn visitors from all over the world.

The current government, after years in the political wilderness, appears to have forgotten how a democracy works. People are elected to both uphold the existing law and be accountable for the laws they prepare and enact.

What Mr. Wildman has done is totally irresponsible. He has instructed wild life officers of this province not to prosecute any of the 1,000 members of the Golden Lake Indian Band for any violations of Ontario's fish and wildlife laws within Algonquin Park. Natives are free to shoot as many moose, deer, wherever and whenever they wish. They can hunt at night. They may use motorized vehicles accessing previously restricted areas. They may fish as much as they want using gill nets or whatever they have at hand. they may take and keep without restriction whatever fish they catch. Remote trout lakes that have a fragile balance and reproducing ability are now open to motorized access by 4-wheelers, ATVs, snowmobiles and motorized watercraft.

All of this in a wildlife sanctuary that as a matter of course has banned hunting for years. Anyone remotely familiar with wild animals knows that they can quickly tell where they can be hunted by humans and where there is a sanctuary. The geese and ducks are huddled at Rotary Park, where they know it's safe, during hunting season. Now, unsuspecting deer and moose that are used to ambling along the Highway 60 corridor with visitors there with cameras, are now fair game to be slaughtered and butchered on the spot. It is just incredible!

The only reason for all this nonsense is that the Government wants to create "a positive atmosphere" for negotiating further Native land

A dam strange story . . .

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

HENRY PARTED THE CURTAIN for a peek at the sky. He'd heard they were supposed to be getting rain and he had a pile of wood to cover over with the tarp. But to his relief, the weather forecast, as usual, had been wrong. A cool blue sky, still slightly pink on the eastern horizon, reassured him that the tarp could wait for at least a few hours. He was about to turn away from the kitchen window and back to his porridge when he saw it.

"Marg, come take a look at this," Henry called to his wife. Putting down her spoon, she came and stood beside him, leaning over the sink to peer out in the direction her husband has pointing.

"He's at it again, isn't he Henry?" Marg noted, shaking her head. "The poor misguided creature. I'll bet there's a story there." Henry couldn't help but smile. His wife thought there was a story everywhere. And she usually found it — or else made one up. He told her she should go into the story business but Marg shrugged off the suggestion with a laugh. She loved to think them up and tell them to her grandchildren. But that's as far as it went. If she ever got serious about her stories, it would spoil the fun.

Henry did agree with Marg about the poor creature, however. It was sad to see him at his fruitless task. Last year should have discouraged him. Henry and Marg agreed that his return proved positively that he was 'one brick short of a load'. Maybe a better expression would be 'one tree short of a forest', Henry thought to himself with a smile. For after all, the 'poor creature' was a beaver.

They had first noticed him last summer, swimming in the channel in front of their house. Although he and Marg were not experts on beavers and their ways, they knew a bit. They knew, for instance, that beavers liked to associate with other beavers and that this particular one was a loner. That in itself they though strange. It did not have a mate and could be seen swimming aimlessly back and forth across the channel for hours.

One morning Marg had been out for a walk and had come upon the beaver just as he was pulling himself up onto the river bank. She didn't know who was more surprised to see the other. He froze in his tracks, staring at Marg and her hot pink jogging suit while she took in his slicked back fur that emphasized the small, piercing eyes. In a flash he had turned and disappeared back into the water with a splash. Having stared into those eyes for the briefest of seconds, Marg felt strangely moved, as though she had looked through a door usually closed. She told Henry later that she had seen loneliness in those eyes.

The thing that was so strange about this beaver was what it had done at the end of last year's summer. As the leaves had started to turn and the boat traffic in the channel decreased to the odd die hard on the weekend, the beaver went to work.

There was an old dock several hundred feet from Henry and Marg's house. It was in poor repair, so much so that few people would even walk on it. There were several stories as to how that dock happened to be there in the first place but suffice it to say, it was in poor repair, in a place seldom, if ever, used by anyone. It stood high above the channel and with the receding fall water level, looked a bit like a sentry lookout perched in the air. And for some strange reason, the beaver chose this spot to build his house in preparation for winter.

That is when Marg and Henry decided this beaver was definitely not right in the head. Maybe, Marg mused, that was why he was an outcast from the beaver community; because he was different, perhaps lacking his full beaver faculties. She wondered aloud to Henry if beavers had the same prejudices as humans when it came to those in their midst who were different from the so-called norm.

Whatever the reason, there was the beaver building in the middle of the rickety old dock. The location couldn't be worse. In fact, it made no sense at all. Out in the open, up high in the air, the spot was totally exposed. The water was nowhere close and there was no place to store food, since the bottom of the house would be the boards of the dock. To see the beaver working so hard on such a hopeless task saddened Henry and Marg. When two boys from a neighbouring cottage pulled the half-finished beaver house apart, they were relieved. Now, they believed, the animal would be forced to rebuild in a more suitable location.

The following summer, the beaver returned to the channel, alone as the year before. They didn't know where he had spent the winter but they were glad

Second trade is now a fact of life for Nicholls

But West Guilford native will wait to report

by MARK PUBLICOVER
Staff Reporter

West Guilford's Bernie Nicholls is on the move again.

The 10-year NHL veteran was sent from the New York Rangers to the Edmonton Oilers along with a pair of young forwards in exchange for Mark Messier last week.

Nicholls began his career in Los Angeles and was traded to the Rangers two seasons ago.

"It's easier the second time," he told The Echo from his newly-built surburban New York home. "The only thing is that my wife is seven months pregnant with twins and we can't move her right now.

"We can't just pick up and go now so we're just basically staying here until we get things straightened out."

His wife, Heather, cannot be moved due to pregnancy complications and Nicholls said the Oilers knew of the situation before making the trade.

Nicholls said Oiler general manager Glen Sather may turn around and trade him instead of waiting for him to report.

"They're a rebuilding team and they could trade me for another young player — you never know what Glen has in mind."

The trade is the second in two years for Nicholls, who will once again have to pick up and move half-way across the continent, buy another house and make more new neighbours.

"That's the bad part about our business," he said. "They don't really care about you as a person, it's just a business to them — but that's life in professional sports.

"We do get paid a lot of money and it's hard for people to sympathize with you but the tough part is that they can move you from one day to the next and there's nothing you can do about it."

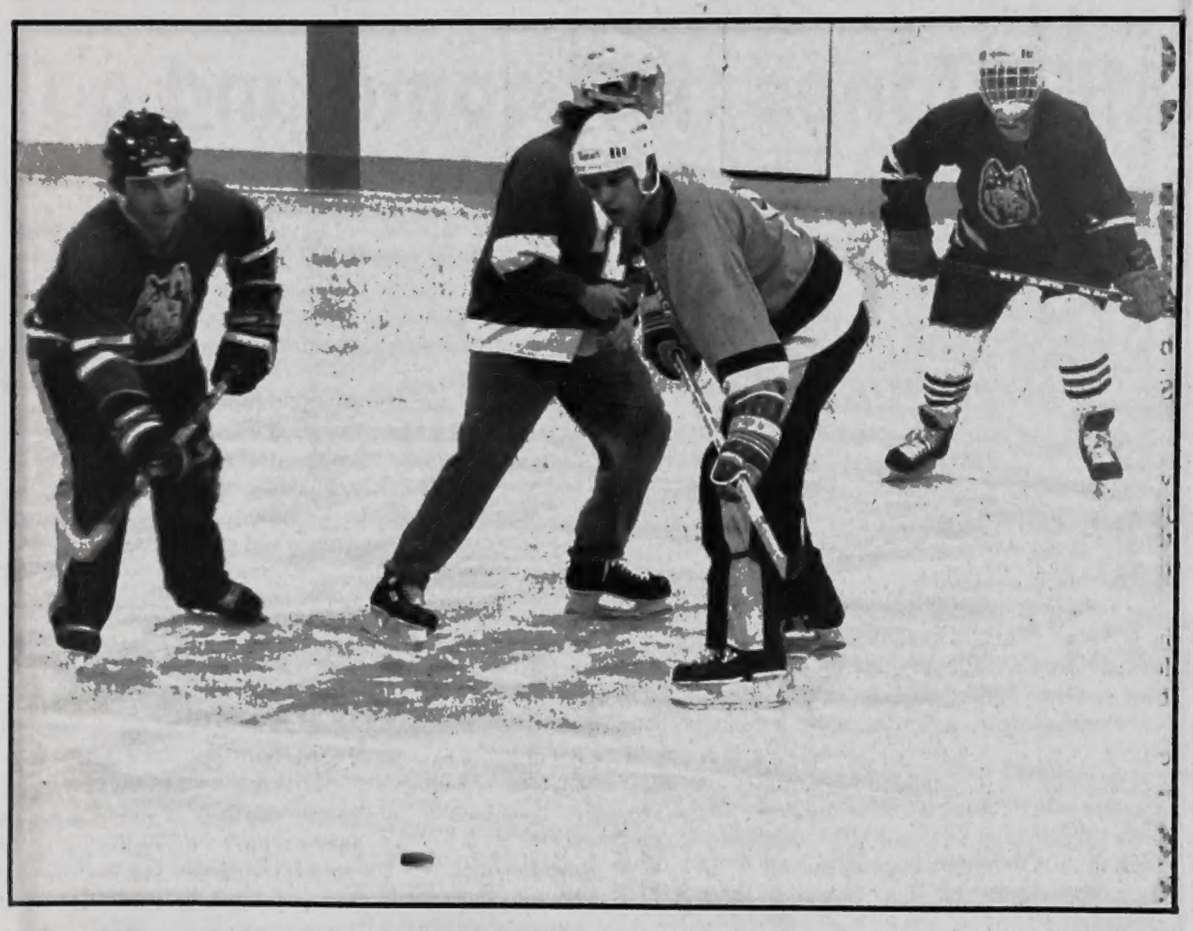
Nicholls met his wife while playing in California and the avid golfer says he enjoyed living there.

"L.A. was great — it's pretty hard not to like the weather and it's a great place to live."

His wife hasn't thought much about the move for obvious reasons but he's prepared to make the move.

"Heather's not a big New York fan anyway. You just have to go where they're going to take care of you and it's Edmonton or wherever, that's what we're going to do."

Nicholls has 364 goals and 504 assists in 706 career NHL games. His best year was 1988-89 when he scored 70 goals and added 80 assists for Los Angeles. Only a handful of players have ever matched that output in one season.



WHO'LL GET IT? Curry Motors' Chris Hodgson and Vasey's Bernie Upton keep their eyes on the puck during an opening game faceoff for the Haliburton men's league on Sunday night at the Dysart arena.

Men's league tests some tiring skaters

Huffing and puffing with legs aching and sweat stinging his eyes, he takes a pass on the wing, skates past the lone defenseman then makes a nice deke around the goaltender to get a shot at the open net.

The shot rings off of the goal post, but it really doesn't matter because he's just playing for fun in the Haliburton Gentleman's Hockey League which began on Sunday and continues until March at the Haliburton Arena.

The popular league has nearly 100 participants and others on a waiting list to get out for some competitive exercise once a week and of course, have a mandatory post-game chat with the boys.

The well-organized league is run by two co-presidents, Bernie Upton and Barry Boice and treasurer Drew Carey.

"We do it because it's fun," Upton said in an interview. "It's been going for a while and there's lots of interest in the league as you can tell from the waiting list."

The league has eight teams, each with 12 players and because more ice-time cannot be obtained, some new players have to be put on a waiting list and can play if other players drop out.

"We expect most the guys on the waiting list to get in," Upton said. "Eight of 13 got to play last

Seniors dumped; juniors win again

by MARK PUBLICOVER
Staff Reporter

The senior football Redmen were outmatched but the unbeaten juniors kept on rolling in Kawartha West high school football action last Friday.

LCVI dominated the seniors and handed them their second straight loss, 41-6, on a wet afternoon in Lindsay.

"We were simply outmatched," coach Gary Brohman said. "They're a dominating team — big, aggressive and fast."

LCVI led 21-0 at the half, scoring on a punt return and a fumble recovery in the Redmen end zone. Quarterback Jay Hughes scored the lone HHSS touchdown on a quarterback sneak from the one-yard line.

Brohman said tailback Peter Van Leeuwen did a good job filling in for injured Mark Klages while both Chris Greenfield and Scott Murison played well both offensively and defensively.

Klages is expected to return next week for a key game against the Falcons in Fenelon Falls.

"The Fenelon game is a big one," Brohman said. "We've got to win it to turn our season around."

The juniors, meanwhile, once again used their strong running game and beat the LCVI juniors 16-0.

Andy Bacon and Peter Brohman led the attack with Jamie Simmons also contributing along the ground.

Simmons opened the scoring in the first half on a four-yard run and Bacon ran it over the line for the conversion to make the score 8-0 after one quarter. The Redmen had a third and one from the LCVI three-yard line in the second quarter but failed to punch it in.

In the second half, the Redmen had a touchdown called back after a penalty but Andy Bacon scored on an eight-yard run and Kevin Morissette passed to brother Mark for the conversion to end the scoring.

"They had a physical team but our rushing game was strong again," Brohman said. "Kevin is handling the ball well and we had another strong game from our offensive line."

Guards Todd McCracken and Andy Billings, tackles Chad Connelly and Anthony Mistroni, centre Mark Stamp and rookie tight-end Dave Hughes successfully opened holes for the backfield once again.

Brohman said the remaining three games will be more difficult for the juniors because the opposition knows the Redmen will be handing off to Bacon and Peter Brohman.

REDMEN WARRIORS: Former HHSS football players Darren Danylyshen, left, Tally Williams, centre, and Alan Rydman have all earned spots on the University of Waterloo team. Danylyshen and Williams are in their second year while Rydman, has started as an offensive lineman in each of his three years with the team. There are currently six Redmen alumni playing university football in Ontario.

Soccer juniors move into first

by MARK PUBLICOVER
Staff Reporter

In high school soccer action, the senior Redmen fell out of playoff contention with their fourth loss in as many starts while the juniors inched closer to a spot in post-season play with a victory over visiting LCVI last Wednesday.

Senior coach Walter Tose said the seniors could have won the game if they had capitalized on more scoring chances but fatigue took its toll and the squad came up on the short end of a 4-1 score.

"I thought there was a significant improvement over other weeks," Tose said. "We had better positional play, our offense is coming along great and our fullbacks are gaining more and more experience each week."

Nico Haedicke scored the lone Redmen goal to tie the game in the early going but LCVI's superior depth and conditioning enabled them to take control of the game after that.

Tose said Bruce Milne did a fine job filling in for goaltender Mike MacKenzie who was away on Wednesday.

He said the team will be working on improving its execution on offense and on communication in preparation for Wednesday's game in Fenelon Falls against the Falcons.

In the junior game, the Redmen missed a couple of scoring chances but won 2-1 on goals by Jonathan Bishop and Jamie Thiverge.

Junior coach Mark Flatman was pleased with the way his forwards

College football teams stock up on Redmen

by MARK PUBLICOVER
Staff Reporter

The pipeline carrying Redmen football players to the university ranks has been flowing well in recent years: six former HHSS students are currently playing for CIAU teams in Ontario.

The Waterloo Warriors roster includes three former Redmen with rookie slotback Darren Danylyshen, second-year defensive back Tally Williams and third-year offensive lineman Alan Rydman, who has been a starter since his first year.

Offensive tackles Duane Cooper of Wilfrid Laurier and Mark Robinson of Queen's and York's Trevor Powers also learned the game from Gary Brohman at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School.

"We teach our players the love for the game of football and after that, it's up to them," Brohman said.

He feels the Redmen program gives its players a good grasp of the fundamentals of the game and the ones who choose to go on to university can go with a good chance of landing a spot on the school's football team if they want.

"Redmen football is an important part of life at HHSS," Brohman said. "If the Lord gives you the talent, we'll give you the fundamentals to be a good football player."

Both Brohman and assistant Redmen coach Tim Davies played football themselves under University of Waterloo coach Tuffy Knight and feel he is about the best there is.

"Redmen players don't have any unfair advantages because we played for Knight," Brohman said. "We simply suggest they go to Waterloo if they want to play football and have good coaching. We believe in their football program."

The MHL This Week makes season debut with a new narrator

by MARK PUBLICOVER

Staff Reporter

IT'S OCTOBER AGAIN and that means it's time for The M.H.L. This Week as action got underway in the Haliburton Men's Hockey League.

I realize I have some big shoes to fill in writing the weekly results because it will simply be impossible to do justice to Chip Trueman's weekly column that appeared last year. But anyway, here goes...

The first three league games were played Sunday night and either the teams are all very well-balanced or everyone was all very tired because the scores were all close.

Vasey Insurance scored three times in the final 10 minutes to tie Curry Motors 6-6 with the league's co-president, Bernie Upton, netting two of them to go along with his two assists on the night.

Brent Flood had a hat-trick for the Motorers who squandered leads of 1-0, 3-1, 4-2 and 6-3 before settling for the tie. Chris Hodgson scored twice and Jim Winn rounded out the scoring for Curry Motors while Floyd Henry potted two for the Brokers and Barry Boice and Carl Rowbotham each scored once.

Roberts-Austin Fuels burned up the ice so much that pilons had to be placed over two spots to cover dangerous holes, but it didn't stop them from dumping Elstone Motors.

Elstone struck first blood but Roberts-Austin took the lead early in the second period and didn't relinquish it although Elstone fought back time and time again. Joe Roberts and Dan Ambridge each netted a pair for the Fuellers while Tim Davies and your humble narrator scored the other two goals for the winners. Ron Yake, Glen Scully, Bruce Cawker and Dave McKay scored for Elstone.

There was a lot of lumber flying in the third game — not hockey sticks but actual lumber — as Emmerson scored three times in the final five minutes to put away Haliburton Lumber 8-4.

Mike MacNaull broke a 3-3 tie near the end of the second period and Emmerson never looked back in a fast-paced game. MacNaull scored four times while Rob Abbs, Ed Davis, Wade MacInnes and Brian Mulholland added the others for Emmerson. Norm Barry, Kevin Phillips, Ernie Bain and Kevin Sisson scored for Haliburton Lumber.

The other opening game goes tonight with Youngdale Fuels taking on Bishop & Wilson at 8 p.m.

Field hockey team wins to keep its streak alive

by MARK PUBLICOVER

Staff Reporter

The HHSS field hockey team improved its league record to 4-0 last week with a pair of wins during a trip to Lakefield.

They downed Lakefield District 3-0 and Crestwood 2-0 on Tuesday before travelling to Toronto for a tournament against some powerful competition over the weekend.

"The girls played really well this weekend despite coming up against some really tough teams," said coach Kit Pizzey.

Their only weak outing was against strong league competitor Thomas A. Stewart, who dominated play and downed HHSS 1-0.

Grade 9 HHSS goaltender Bobbi Griffin turned away a barrage of shots from T.A.S. in her first game between the pipes that gave regular backstop Brenda Lavender a breather. Haliburton lost 1-0 to Toronto's Havergal private girl's school and had a scoreless tie against Unionville to end the tournament.

"The girls played really well positionally against Havergal and in fact the referee came up to me after the game and said they played really well," Pizzey said.

She played her starters for the entire game against Unionville to give them a chance to work together and get conditioned for the remainder of their season in Kawartha.

Last Tuesday in Lakefield, HHSS won handily over Lakefield District, who didn't even get a shot at the Haliburton goal. Danielle LaRue scored within seconds of the opening face-off, Ursula Beachli added another five minutes later and Rebecca Whalen set up LaRue for the final goal early in the second half in the 3-0 win.

Pizzey said the Crestwood game was a closer-checking one but HHSS was able to dominate for their fourth league win. LaRue scored the opener on a fine set-up by Beachli and Arlene Jackman in the first half and HHSS scored on a penalty corner in the second when Stacey Vick fired a Nessie Jackman pass through the legs of the Crestwood goaltender. Lavender has yet to give up a goal in league play in the HHSS net after playing all four games.

The team travels to Bancroft for another exhibition tournament on Wednesday and resumes league play at home on Oct. 17 against Norwood and the tough Thomas A. Stewart squad.

Men's Hockey League starts its new season

year."

He said there are 20 new players this year, of which ten are currently on the waiting list.

Each player takes a turn refereeing games during the year and the money saved on officiating costs is spent on a golf tournament in the fall and on an awards banquet at the end of the year.

Eight businesses in the area provide money that helps out with the banquet and buys team uniforms. Bishop and Wilson Ltd., Curry Motors, Elstone Motors, Emmerson Lumber, Haliburton Lumber, Roberts-Austin Fuels, Vasey Insurance and Youngdale Fuels have secured sponsorship and Upton said other businesses are waiting in the wings should any of the current supporters decide to drop out.

After the teams all play each other three times in the regular season, a one-day championship tournament will be held to crown a league champion on March 22, 1992.

To encourage safe and gentlemanly competition, the league prohibits intentional body checking, slapshots and of course, fighting. Having players referee games also contributes to keeping the competition fun as one is less likely to heckle a referee if he knows he has to don the stripes next week.

kept offensive drives going to improve the team's record to 2-1-1.

Thiverge opened the scoring in the first half by converting a Richie Mills corner kick but LCVI tied it shortly after. Bishop scored the winner on a long shot from the right wing in the second half after LCVI started to take control of the centre of the field.

"We played well," Flatman said, "but we have to work on moving from wing to the middle with a little more control."

He said next week's game in Fenelon Falls is the key game for the Redmen's season and will give a good indication of their chances of winning the Kawartha West title.

A friendly beaver to see him back. The sight of his round slick head poking above the water's edge was familiar and friendly. Unfortunately, he remained a loner. Marg wondered if he had lost a mate and like some birds, had mated for life and so would remain forever alone. It was a sad thought, one that was emphasized one morning when she looked out her kitchen window.

The white swan had returned for a brief visit. Every year, on its way to West Guilford for the winter, the solitary white swan stopped in their channel for a day or two. Some years it's visit was very brief and if Henry and Marg were busy with other things or away visiting the grandchildren, they missed it completely. The morning Marg parted her curtain to see its white majesty cruising the channel, she saw the beaver's head leaving a thin wake not far from the big bird.

It seemed fitting that the two should share company in what must otherwise be very solitary lives. Whether by choice or chance, each were loners. The next day the swan was gone and the beaver once again began building a house on the old dock. As Marg watched him pulling branches up onto the boards she wondered why he had chosen this place again.

She and Henry decided to move the beaver house, which was just underway, down by the water's edge. They didn't know if the beaver would leave it there but felt it was worth a try. They'd like to have the animal stay close by. He had become almost a friend.

PEOPLE

A new life for a political survivor

Tom Clifford on course for quieter times

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

TO BE A SURVIVOR of Toronto's political jungle for three decades, one imagines a battle-scarred veteran, with razor-sharp teeth for biting into opponents, a multitude of hands reaching out into other people's pockets, and keen eyes for pouncing on any opportunity for self advancement.

Yet Tom Clifford is more apt to strike you as the Mr. Rogers of Nathan Phillips Square, his political neighbourhood for the past 27 years. Soft-spoken, avuncular, a member of a United Church choir for 40 years, Mr. Clifford's personality seems more in keeping with his first profession: a friendly grocery store owner serving the needs of the neighbourhood where he was born and grew up.

Now there's one more twist: this summer he became the new owner of the Lakeside Golf Club in West Guilford.

And no, he isn't going to run for Dysart et al council.

"Two or three have said I should but I assure you I'm not," he smiles as he relaxes in a quiet part of the office.

If Mr. Clifford is not the image of a veteran politician, he knows it. "All politicians are, I'm afraid, tarnished with the same brush. I heard someone talk about 'all those crooks at city hall' and I resented that. On the other hand, if a politician is not doing his job then people have the right to say something derogatory. If I wasn't doing my job I'd expect people to tell men.

"I've never had to yell and scream to let my thoughts be known."

Since announcing his decision not to seek another term of office — Mr. Clifford voted for a resolution that city employees had to retire at 65, and with his 66th birthday this year, he thought it hypocritical to carry on — the people of Ward 9 have been telling him "Don't go!"

"I was introduced the other night and I was almost falling under the chair because they were saying I was such a nice guy," he says with enough pride to make his modesty seem more realistic. "People were telling me 'You can't leave, we need you.' They call me a legend and a fixture. They all still respect me very much because I worked hard for them.

"I even had a letter from one reporter who said 'We had a lot of differences of opinion but I always respected you.'"

That Mr. Clifford has a positive attitude about journalists is surprising, given how reporters are also politicking amongst themselves to see who can get the front page story.

"I find most reporters fair and accurate," he says, adding there's one reporter he simply refuses to talk to. In 27 years of politics, Mr. Clifford has had two fundraising dinners, and the reporter suggested he supported development because developers supported him. "By innuendo he was saying I was on the take and I didn't appreciate that."

Not denying that all politicians aren't as ethical, Mr. Clifford says "maybe it's just my upbringing" which makes him seek the high road. Being cutthroat "has never been my way of living. I've always felt my fellow man is as important as I am. I get that from my religious background. Until I got up here I never missed church in my life. I've held every position at Simpson Avenue United Church."

Toronto politician Tom Clifford is taking a swing at owning a golf course

In 1892, Tom Clifford's grandfather started a grocery store at Gerrard and Pape. The business was passed down to Mr. Clifford's father. Tom was the third son of a family which would also include a daughter (Dorothy Linklater, who with her husband Bob helped Mr. Clifford run the golf course this summer.)

As soon as they were able, the children were expected to help out at the store. Young Tom delivered the Star and the Telegram and he can also remember neighbours with chicken coops. "We could walk up to O'Connor Drive and there were farms there. We used to got to Ellesmere where we picked up tomatoes and vegetables." This was the time when the Royal York was the largest hotel in the British Empire.

When he was 18 — he was born in 1925 — he joined the Armed Forces and went overseas. "When I came back I did a very short stint at university but decided to run the store instead. Why? It just seemed a part of the natural way of things."

His father was an avid reader. "He was always very interested in what was going on in the govern-

'A good pothole fixer'

Veteran politician served the needs of his constituents

ment — if he was alive today I know what he'd say," and from Mr. Clifford's smile, the listener would be in for an earful.

So to Mr. Clifford, getting involved in municipal politics just seemed like one more way of serving his community. "I liked people and a lot of people convinced me I should run for public service. I think they saw a person who would care for what they wanted to do."

The accepted practice in those days was to climb the ladder beginning with the school board, and in 1964, Mr. Clifford was elected to the Toronto School Board. Because he had the most votes of all candidates, he was therefore appointed to the Metro board.

At that time, trustees were not earning a dime, except for a $200 annual travel allowance. He fought for the right for a small compensation and by the time he left, trustees were earning $1,800 a year. "Now they get nearly $50,000 and it should be a full-time job for that kind of money."

Mr. Clifford still gets invited to the functions of the four high schools in his area. He now meets parents of graduates who can remember Mr. Clifford giving them their diplomas.

By 1969, Mr. Clifford was ready to take on city hall and his constituents were ready to send him there. In the following years, he would also serve two terms on Metro council, but in the past election, he opted to remain on city council. He gave up the store, which is now a huge supermarket, in 1971 to devote himself to politics. (Yet at the same time he's been running a seniors program at Gerrard Square, which he helped establish, for the past 21 years.)

"I learned you have to cater to the people's needs and work hard. One reporter, Colin Vaughan, said I was a good pothole fixer, which meant I look after my constituents."

But simply being a pothole fixer — you complain, I fix it — is a double-edged sword. "The trouble with being elected is (pleasing people to get votes) is the name of the game and the way to get re-elected is to satisfy your constituents. However, there are many times when I went against their wishes.

"I remember when a big petition came before me and I could see that in the long run it wouldn't be good for the city so I didn't support it. If people respect your feelings, they'll accept that."

One of Mr. Clifford's goals was to see Toronto leave behind Muddy York and prepare for the future as Canada's largest city.

"When I was chairman of the land use committee, in the back of my mind was the revenue we'd receive (from new developments.) We want to keep the tax rate as low as we can. A lot of people were against the Sheraton Centre (on Queen near Bay Street.) It brings in millions of tax revenue ever year and at one time they wanted to keep that green space, while across the street they had Nathan Phillips Square.

"I'm quite proud of the fact Toronto has grown as much as it has."

Despite objections, Mr. Clifford was also in favour of the Eaton Centre — "downtown is enlivened because of the Eaton Centre. We opened Yonge Street up and cleaned it up" —, the CN Tower and the SkyDome. "The only thing against the Dome I have is the big debt."

In his own neighbourhood, the biggest problem was how to fit all the people into an area built when a vehicle referred to a narrow buggy attached to a horse.

"It was a very Anglo Saxon, middle class neighbourhood and the average frontage wouldn't be more than 18 to 20 feet. Our biggest problem is parking. It's atrocious."

As his neighbourhood has evolved to include a lot of Chinese, East Indian and Greek residents, so too has city council had to change its ways. But a staunch traditionalist, Mr. Clifford has often run against the political wishes of a multi-cultural city.

"Recently we had a big debate whether we should continue saying the Lord's Prayer," says Mr. Clifford, who's very much against the resulting minute of silence. "Basically this country was built on Christian principles. Other people have the right to the way they feel about it, but we wouldn't go to another country to change their traditions. You ask people to accept what has been here."

He can claim one victory in the headline which read "Tom Saved the Queen!" He convinced fellow councillors to retain the singing of God Save the Queen.

After being part of the political lifeblood of the city for so long, Mr. Clifford decided he couldn't go quietly into that good night of retirement. "I don't want to do nothing. I see these seniors sitting around the shopping malls, gossiping in the morning, and I never want to be like that."

Originally he thought of buying a golf course with three other friends, but when he came up to West Guilford, he decided to go it alone. This past summer was hectic because he's still a councillor until November's election, but it was made easier with the help of his sister and Jim Elstone, whom he hired to look after the grounds.

Mr. Clifford has been pleasantly surprised about small town life. "I'm learning a new lake every day," he laughs, having already figured out he lives on the Grass Lake side of Green Lake. (Only in West Guilford. . .)

"I'm already missing politics up to a point but I'm ready to relax," he says.

Not everyone would call running a busy golf course a good way to relax, but it's with affable charm he meets and greets the golfers about to circle the nine holes — making sure they stick to the rules, of course. Perhaps those constituents who voted for him all these years will now vote with their clubs and make Lakeside the most popular golf course for Toronto Ward 9.

Minister is giving in

claims. The Golden Lake Indians have recently moved to the area and laid claim to a territory of Algonquin that has yet to be proven valid. The government in a fit of collective guilt has given in before the matter has yet to be even heard or resolved. Whether they have a valid claim or not will be determined by a due process of the law as the matter is before the courts.

What a Minister of the Crown must do is uphold the law that exists. His rule, by decree, simply is another variation of the old storm the barricades opposition approach of wrapping themselves in a flag in the self-righteousness with a copy of one hip pocket and another copy of Civil Disobedience sticking out of another. Mr. Wildman has forgotten that he is no longer in opposition where he can conveniently recommend to flout the law if it doesn't suit the politically correct thought patterns. Rather, he is now a sworn minister of a provincial government who must serve the best interests of all the citizens of Ontario. His department is entrusted to protect a fragile resource for the future generations, so people yet born may enjoy it — not to squander it over some unproven land claim.

The first sign of a democracy in decay occurs with the exclusion of one group of people from honouring the law followed by the enforcement of another set of laws for another group. Then those in government flout the law for their own purposes without being accountable to parliament or debate. The final step is to enact different laws for different citizens. It rapidly appears as if there is no such thing anymore as equality in this province. Some are obviously more equal than others. If Mr. Wildman sincerely wants to grant the Golden Lake Band unlimited hunting and fishing rights, then let him bring forth legislation, let it be debated and let history and future elections judge its correctness. Otherwise, to put it kindly, it appears Mr. Wildman doesn't know the difference between a buck or doe when it comes to wildlife management.

The tragedy is that future generations will suffer because of his lack of knowledge and wisdom. Wildman's actions, unless overruled, are a damning indictment for the government's inability to govern one of Canada's most important provinces. Bob Rae needs to step in and act before any more damage is done.

Naturalists give MNR strategy a bad grade

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The Ministry of Natural Resources' ears must have been burning on a recent morning when a group of naturalists gathered in Ron Lawrence's living room to discuss Looking Ahead: A Wild Life Strategy for Ontario.

They were not amused. And, particularly in the case of the rather uncompromising Lawrence, they were downright scornful.

"This is a typical weasel question," he scoffs as he reads the manual's accompanying questionnaire — before apologizing to the weasel for casting aspersions on its name. He's referring to the line that reads: "The use of wildlife should be permitted only if the population of the species involved is self-sustaining."

"All species are self-sustaining if they're allowed to be," the noted author and wildlife authority says.

Or what about the "guiding concept" that "It is inevitable and acceptable that our needs will have an impact on the ecosystem"?

"It doesn't have to be inevitable and it's certainly not acceptable," Lawrence says. "I really got quite annoyed when I was reading this.

"By in large this is an exercise in futility. . . It is giving license to the Ministry to do what it has always done."

Looking Ahead is the result of two years of "brainstorming" with various users of Ontario's natural resources, called the Ontario Wildlife Working Group. Because this also includes spokespeople for hunters, trappers and developers, there are points of view that Lawrence doesn't exactly agree with.

Nor do the group of people gathered in his living room: Christine Mason, wildlife co-ordinator of the Ontario Humane Society; Joanne Moodie of the Brockville Human Society; Diane McKee and Rob Burr of the Ontario Humane Society; Rick Foley of the Alliston and District Humane Society; Bill Leeming of the Canadian Federation for Wildlife Protection; Michael Polak, a PhD candidate about to travel to Costa Rica with Adrian Forsythe; local social activist H. Michael Collins; and Peter Schliefenbaum of the Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve (where there's hunting and trapping activity.)

"It took me a whole day to acclimatize myself to pick up the terminology," says Mason, who was part of the original group which drafted the report. Eventually, it will become the basis of the Ministry's new Wildlife Act, which will replace the present Game and Fish Act. (Lawrence says this too is an exercise in futility since he says there is no legislation which gives the province ownership over flora and fauna. "Policy isn't law; policy you can't take to court.")

"I'm glad you're indignant," Mason told Lawrence. "At the first meeting we spent the best part a day defining wildlife."

"Wildlife and habitat must always go together," said Lawrence, who gave the impression he was a professor with his tutorial students. "A tree is a life — let's always consider the habitat angle."

The report is rather lengthy, but on this morning, the group was only discussing the questionnaire. People are asked to add their comments to some of the "guiding concepts", outlined in more detail in the report.

Lawrence wanted to focus on the questionnaire because that's what the public will deal with; few people will actually read the entire report but more will feel tempted to jot down an opinion or two.

"The influence of the MNR is very strong," he says. "Questions are couched in a language that can confuse, are ambiguous, and in some cases quite wrong. There are things in there so utterly unbiological."

The report designates the MNR as the lead ministry to assume responsibility for the stewardship of wildlife. Lawrence would prefer to see an independent conservation authority. "The problems are all due to the so-called management of the MNR."

"It says it's acceptable we should have an impact on the environment," says Mason. "If you're starting out with that mindset, you're paving the way for anything you do or say."

"A few of these things seem like make-work projects," Leeming says in response to the report's suggestion to develop urban nature centres. Mason said the Ontario Trappers Association went into receivership and the province wants to provide alternative forms of employment.

Lawrence agreed the Ministry seems to be re-inventing the wheel when one guiding concept calls for classifications of wetlands. "A wetland is a wetland is a wetland," he said. "Do we have to go through this again? If you want to employ people to study the biology, now that would be great."

When it comes to monitoring diseases, Collins noted that in the wild, natural forces will look after themselves. "All we're really talking about here are diseases man can inherit. We're not worrying about animals."

Collins also noted there is an excellent inventory of diseases, which Ontario could access, in Atlanta, Georgia. "But no, we'll pay taxpayers' dollars to monitor it here."

Not surprisingly, by the time the group got through the 12-page questionnaire, the consensus was "it is cleverly couched to get people to say yes without knowing what they were saying yes to," Lawrence says. "We feel we cannot trust the Ministry's involvement."

He will draft an overall critique and send it to the Ontario Humane Society, which will forward it to the Ministry — whose eyes will then burn.

'By in large this is an exercise in futility. It is giving license to the Ministry to do what it has always done', says author R.D. Lawrence, above at far right, who invited fellow naturalists to his Highlands home to discuss "Looking Ahead: A Wild Life Strategy for Ontario". They were not impressed.

At Victoria Street School, children with special needs aren't separated from the other children. Instead, to the benefit of all, they're . . .

Just like everyone else

by MARK PUBLICOVER
Staff Reporter

ANDREW AND LAURA seem just like all the other kids they laugh and play with in Rosemary Malotte's busy Victoria Street kindergarten classroom.

And they are.

They're curious and energetic and like to read, watch TV, listen to music, laugh and of course play with their friends.

The only difference is that Andrew, 6, and Laura, 5, have Down's Syndrome, a chromosomal disorder that makes it harder for them to learn things.

"Sometimes kids will ask 'What's wrong with Andrew?' or 'What's wrong with Laura?'" teacher's assistant Sandy Winder says. "I tell them there's nothing wrong with them — they're just different."

Not too long ago, these two youngsters would have been segregated because of their differences, robbing them of the opportunity to make many friends and grow up with a variety of children.

But attitudes have changed and parents now have the choice of sending their children, regardless of their differences, to public schools.

"It would be devastating to have Andrew segregated from the rest of the kids," says his mom, Brenda Bourgeois, of Eagle Lake. "He'll learn and develop by being with other children."

Teaching developmentally disabled children is nothing new to Victoria Street Public School. In the early '80s, the school began a developmentally delayed program for children with learning disabilities that has been discontinued because these children are now integrated into regular classes. The school has also welcomed two pervasive development disorder students, who like Andrew and Laura receive constant supervision from teaching assistants.

"I think it's important for parents to know that when they're ready to put their handicapped children in school, there are places like this," Bourgeois says. "The staff is really great — they're open and understanding. They say call anytime and drop in if I want."

'It would be devastating to have Andrew (far left, above) segregated from the rest of the kids,' says his mom, Brenda Bourgeois. As teacher Chris Lynd plays with Laura Plouffe, far right, the other children think it's just natural to join in. Later in life, these children will also likely have fewer prejudices

One in every 600 children born in Canada has Down's Syndrome. It is a condition that happens at conception when a child's cells have an extra chromosome. Down's Syndrome affects different children differently — some severely and some moderately.

Both Andrew and Laura appear only moderately challenged as they interact and learn with their classmates.

Bourgeois says her son loves school and "would come seven days a week if he could." In his second year of kindergarten, Andrew's enjoyment is evident as he teases and hams it up with just about everyone in the room.

Laura's not shy either, as she shows everyone a book she picked up after climbing all over her father sitting in the corner chair.

"Laura has a high capacity for affection and love," says her dad, Brian Plouffe. "Learning takes her longer but once she has it, she has it."

Mom Diane Plouffe says her daughter loves to swim and play in the park and also likes reading and listening to music, particularly Sharon, Lois and Bram.

"Our hope is that she'll be able to grow up with her peers," she says. "We hope that she'll keep friends."

It is too early to tell whether or not Andrew and Laura will be able to move from grade to grade with the other children and decisions will be made each year whether to move them or keep them back, depending on their progress and other interests.

Principal Michael Burke said an Identification Placement and Review Committee, made up of himself, the education director, teacher and a psychomitrist will help parents decide whether their children should pass from grade to grade or not.

"We just have to take it one day at a time," Bourgeois says.

Judging by the fun they have playing with their classmates, Andrew and Laura are in no hurry.

HAPPY 100th!!!!

Lucy Burgess definitely deserves a celebration

by MARTHA PERKINS

LUCY BURGESS'S VOICE resonates with the past. In lilting tones and quaint turns of phrase, she'll tell you what it is like to have lived through a century of change. And when she sings you a song in the language which seems choked with consonants, you'll wish you were back with her in Neath, Glamorganshire, South Wales.

On October 6, 1891, the Thomases welcomed their fourth child. Eventually the family would grow to include 11 children but "my mother buried two on the same day from whooping cough. I can remember the minister putting them into a little white coffin," says Mrs. Burgess, who now charms her way into the hearts of everyone at Hyland Crest in Minden.

Her father, like most other men in the area, worked at the tin works, which made cans for such things as tomatoes. "The tin men went with a towel around their necks, they'd perspire so much. The tin was in sheets, red hot coming out of the furnace."

The colliers, the ones who went into the mines, also had a tough time of it. "They used to work underground and they'd go down clean but come up black."

With such a dirty, exhausting way to make a living, one major problem in the small towns was drunkenness. After work the men would go to a pub and arrive home the next morning, hoping their wives would be kindly enough disposed to put them in bed. When later asked what she liked about her husband, Sidney Burgess, who died in 1964, Mrs. Burgess says "He was no drunkard, a good singer, and good at chapel prayer."

No one was spared from the toils of hard work, however. "We'd go out if it was only to earn a penny to give to mother," Mrs. Burgess says, now relaxing in a quiet lounge at Hyland Crest. She had to quit school at 12 to work. She scrubbed stone floors, do errands for a neighbour, run messages, or do the washing. Anything to help meagre ends meet. Later, as her renown as an excellent if untrained nurse spread, she would lay out the bodies of the recently deceased, a task she took pride in as it meant so much to the families. Not a penny was asked for this neighbourly deed.

Yet when all is said and done, Mrs. Burgess also talks of happiness. And the main reason for that is the wondrous singing which would take everyone's minds off the hardships.

"It was such a lovely life of living, the singing was a big thing," she says before breaking out into a Welsh song which would trip anyone else's tongue before they reached the tenth note. (When her sister asked her parents why they never taught the children the ancient Welsh language, their father replied "'If I'd learnt you Welsh you'd know all that your mother and I were talking about.' My mother could write it wonderful. I'm not a good scholar," Mrs. Burgess says. However, her son John later adds that in the industrial revolution, Neath become the hub of iron and tin manufacturing. The area was flooded with the English and, as the locals said, "Welsh was pushed up to the valleys where the coal pits were.")

Every year, all the villages would gather for a gymanfa ganu — we think that's pronounced command ver ganey — and prizes would be given to the best choirs. "I went in Messiah a few times," Mrs. Burgess says, and with her beautiful voice, she would still be a welcome addition today.

The people in Wales needed all the notes happiness they could get during the two world wars. Because of the tin works, Neath was a frequent bombing target. "You'd put the little ones to bed then the warden would come and we'd have to wake the children up and take them into the ground cellars."

Sidney Burgess was conscripted but soon sent back to Neath because they needed men in the iron works. He drove the blasting engine, a four storey affair which was really a glorified bellows. Raw iron was mixed with lime to make huge vats of pig iron, which was then used to make other metals.

In World War II, families had to survive on rations of half a pound of sugar and two ounces of margarine. "We had to go into queues for food and you'd get to the front, 'Sold out.' The next one, 'Sold out.'

"It was terrible, nobody knows," Mrs. Burgess says of the war years. Asked how she got through it, just as she survived the other tribulations of life, Mrs. Burgess says "We had plenty of neighbours. They'd help one another more than I've ever seen. Everyone would do a little bit of washing or cleaning. That's what you want, a good life, a helpful life. 'Go fetch Burge,' that's what the kids would say."

Shortly after she married at age 24, Sidney's brother's wife died so the Burgesses moved to the ancient town of Briton Heath to live with the brother and take care of his four young children. Sidney and Lucy would have one son, John, who would later become a missionary in the Belgian Congo before arriving in Canada. Twenty years ago, John brought his mother over to Canada from Wales. Ten years later, when she was 90, Lucy Burgess went before a judge, answered his questions about Canada, and became a Canadian citizen.

'It was such a lovely life of living, the singing was such a big thing,' Lucy Burgess says of what it was like to grow up in Wales — a century ago. On Sunday at Hyland Crest, Mrs. Burgess celebrated her 100th birthday

"We've got no much relations there now, all gone," Mrs. Burgess says of why the move was not such a difficult transition. Partly because of their sister's dedication, her younger brothers and sisters had a much easier time of youth. One brother, who Mrs. Burgess lovingly says was spoiled, became the secretary to the last British governor general to Sudan. His son, who won a scholarship for Oxford at age 16, went on to earn his PhD and write for the Financial Times of London. After the Persian Gulf war, this nephew went to report on the effects of the war. He was travelling in a truck along roads strewn with oil when the truck caught on fire and everyone was burnt to death.

When Mrs. Burgess speaks of her son John, it is with nothing but praise and admiration. The pride of a mother shines out of her eyes. In 1977, John and his wife Mary, who has Alzheimers and also lives at Hyland Crest, retired from the ministry and moved to the Bobcaygeon Road. Every day he visits his wife and mother and on Sunday, leads the worship service.

When asked what advice she'd give to someone who wanted to live a century, Mrs. Burgess smiles and says "Well, I've had a hard life and I'd tell you to live a good life. The Lord helps you a lot. That's what they say — God will take care of you, be not afraid.

"I never thought I'd be 100," she laughs quietly.

"She's the kindest person out," says her son. "She'd give you the last penny she's got. She's extremely kind, very quiet and very kind Christian. Once a week, a staff person will take her to Mrs. Eastman's room — she's 102 — to visit and together they will say the Lord's Prayer and 23rd Psalm.

"She feels for people who have gone through things because so went through so much prior to her marriage. The Welsh people are tough though."

On Sunday, everyone gathered to celebrate Mrs. Burgess's sweetness. A woman who has endeared herself to all who have met her turned 100, and people wanted her to know how special a gift this was.

Love conquers all, even during tough sledding of the Great Depression

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

FOR A WOMAN who looks a decade younger than her 89 years, Millie Roberts certainly had to grow up at a very young age.

The year was 1920. The Great Depression was a few years off but the people of Haliburton County long had the practice of making do. Everything was going well for 18-year-old Millie Howe: she had a job, she had a beau, and she had a good home and family. But then her mother died. Millie's oldest sister had just married and there were four young brothers to take care of. The youngest was only eight months old. Millie Howe had to change from a girl to a mother overnight.

"I just made up my mind I would look after those children but it was quite a lot of responsibility."

And yet when Mrs. Roberts talks about those days now, she talks of love.

That's largely because her beau turned out to have a heart of gold. After two years of courtship, Lee Roberts asked Millie Howe if she would marry him that August. While other men might be frightened off by the thought of a ready-made family, he simply wanted to do all he could to help.

"He thought if we got married he could help me with the children," says Mrs. Roberts in her neat white-frame house at the end of Victoria Street in Haliburton. She laughs. "He always nursed the babies at the table. He said it got so it didn't seem right if he didn't have a baby on his knee to feed."

The four Howe boys, Bert, Roy, Clarence and Don were followed by the Roberts' own children: Eileen, Doris, Faye, Mabel, Myra, Jack, Carol and Roy. Compared to today, raising 12 children in a house which originally had no running water nor electricity seems like a great hardship, but Mrs. Roberts can look fondly back on those years.

"We had to bake our own bread, make our own butter, pick our own berries to make our preserves and grow our own garden. Any old day at all was wash day.

"But it was great for the children and none of them has brought me any trouble."

One daughter, Mabel Everall, lives down the street while another daughter, Eileen Caines, is only as far as a walk across the pavement. If it wasn't for her arthritis and recent eye surgery, Mrs. Roberts would not have a complaint in the world.

She's not quite sure where she was born that May 24th in 1902 but it was in the southern half of the county. "I thought for a long time my name was Mildred but I found out when I got my birth certificate a few years ago that it is just Millie."

Life of faith is important too

Her family soon moved to Haliburton, where Mrs. Roberts can remember cows roaming the streets. "You'd see a cow here, there, all over the place. I don't know if there was someone around to clean it up or not."

Living in town made it easier for her father, Ira Howe, who was a foreman in the Malloy and Bryants bush camps, logging the forests around Drag and Haliburton Lakes. Every winter weekend he'd come home to be with his family.

"He was one of those men who was forever young," fondly remembers his second oldest daughter. "He was a friend, he liked young people. He would always sing me a song, sometimes a sad one, and I can remember when my lip would go down and he'd have to laugh and say 'Never mind, it's alright.'"

Her mother was Minnie Scroter who was born on the Dutch Line near Kinmount. When asked to describe her, Mrs. Roberts says "Just a great mother. She sent us children to the Baptist Sunday School on Highland Street (where the bakery stands today.) It started at 2 p.m. and Mr. Finch was the minister. Mrs. Finch would take the younger children and Ben Walling would take the older ones. There was no fooling around in his class."

People were baptized in Head Lake and one afternoon, 12-year-old Millie joined about a dozen other friends by the lake, across from where the high school now is. Accustomed to watching others, she wasn't at all frightened when the minister dipped her back into the water.

Young Millie loved to sing, and she loved hymns the best. It was at a church concert, when she was performing with sister Violet, that Mrs. Roberts believes she first met her husband. She was 16 and working in a boarding house, her education finished when her years at Victoria Street School reached entrance exams. Like many others, her parents were not in the position to send her to Lindsay for high school.

"I never got very far but I learned from experience," says the wise octogenarian. "And my whole life I have read, read, read. In my house there are books galore. People don't read the Bible enough and there's so many things that are hard to understand unless you read. Unless you read good books you don't really understand what life's all about."

'He thought if we got married he could help me with my brothers and sisters, Millie (Howe) says of her 1920 marriage to Lee Roberts. He was the perfect father for those children

Lee Roberts learned how to do a variety of jobs: in the summer he would farm and in the winter he would log. When he was still quite young, he bought Uncle Curly Bill Roberts' farm on the Harburn. After they married, Lee and Millie spent two years in Haliburton with Mr. Howe before moving to the farm, which was probably on what is today the corner of Harburn and Carroll Roads.

Carroll Road is named after Louis Carroll, a doctor who soon befriended the Roberts and brought three of their children into the world. Knowing that Mr. Roberts and Mr. Howe were self-taught carpenters as well as bush men, Dr. Carroll asked them to build a hunting lodge for him on the shores of Drag Lake. The two men drew all the lumber and set to work on what is now the Domain of Killien. The cabins they also built were later sold and some are still on the lake.

"We loved Dr. Carroll," says Mrs. Roberts. "We trusted him, we knew he was a good doctor. In our house he was very much one of the family, very easy to get along with and Lee worked quite a bit for him and we were good friends."

Shortly after this venture, the Roberts also moved closer to the lake, just east of the lodge, where their daughters would eventually work, cooking and cleaning for the hunters and fishermen who would take advantage of the bountiful forests and lakes. Mr. Roberts also was a guide and everyone looked forward to the camaraderie of hunting season.

Eventually, the Roberts would move to Victoria Street where they were able to enjoy a quieter life until Mr. Roberts death, at age 89, nine years ago.

"We had lots of love in our home and that's the secret of a good life," says Mrs. Roberts. "Even if you have hard times, if you have lots of love and pray a lot, that will see you through."

That faith has certainly been a constant friend for Mrs. Roberts, who looks surprised when asked why faith is so important to her. "Why it's all we have. We must have our faith — that's what we have to look forward to. It's all worthwhile in the end."

Although she attended the Baptist church as a girl, after she was married they attended St. George's Anglican Church, where Mrs. Roberts still makes her way to every Sunday. Indeed, when she looks back over all the changes which have taken place in her lifetime, the one thing that makes her sad is the diminished role the church plays in the wider community.

"People have got too busy. For one thing, they're leaving Christ out of things. It's a sad mistake for the children that are coming up because there are children who don't hear about it in their homes and they're not going to know about it or think it's important — and it's the most important thing there is."

The advice she has to give to young couples starting out is "If you have a disagreement, talk it out. Never walk away angry. Have lots of love in your heart and like I said before, pray about everything and you'll always find an answer.

"The biggest word in the alphabet is love. You HAVE to have love and give your child love, lots of love. Show them what love means."

Four younger brothers, eight children and her husband grew to know exactly what she means.

A girl who cared and dreamed

Sandy Bannon planned to help others

This is the Eulogy given by Frank Wallace at Sandra Bannon's Funeral Sept. 30, 1991. Sandy, a 17-year-old high school student, was murdered on September 27 in Carnarvon.

FOR THOSE OF YOU who don't know me I was Sandy's history teacher and have known Sandy and Cynthia Hubercheck (whose mother Renee was injured during the shooting) well for at least two years. I would like to offer a few personal perspectives of Sandy.

First, as a student, Sandy had a great ability to think through any problems presented to her clearly, quickly and almost without effort. School work came easily to her.

One had the feeling that she didn't have to work as hard as others to get excellent marks, and excellent marks she got regularly. As of this year she had made her course selections with definite universities in mind to pursue a career in law.

She felt she had an ability to help people with problems and thought that law was the best way to go to achieve that, given her interests and abilities. Frequently a theme appeared and reappeared, in tests, projects, discussions, and essays: Truths about life and the meaning of life. When it came to these two areas she had high expectations of herself and others.

As a friend, I was allowed the opportunity to watch a very close relationship grow between Cynthia and her.

Both of them had an intimate, mischievous sense of fun that would surface Monday mornings in home form before the school day began, recounting weekend events. They laughed a lot about the mistakes they made, the things they did together. It wasn't all fun and games though. Sometimes — not often though — there were days were they would not talk to each other. But out of this emerged mutual respect. I remember hearing Sandy say to Cynthia earlier this year: "You know the way I feel about this topic, but you are old enough to make your own mind up."

She told me earlier this year about how she had been a bit of a rebel before I came to know her in Grade 11. And how she just did not feel the need anymore to go out and have a wild time.

She was reflective about life, wise maybe, serene, she was a girl at peace with herself — always honest. She was a person who took a stand on issues and didn't worry particularly about peer group pressure.

She once said to me "I used to think that when you die you die and that's it. But . . .," she added, ". . . I cannot get it out of my mind — no matter what, something goes on about you, your life just doesn't end when you die. I don't know what it is — it defies explanation — but something of you goes on".

She would not frequently make points in a class group discussion. This was not her style. No. She was basically quiet and shy. She would come up quietly after class and talk about issues. She said egos sometimes got in the way of reaching conclusions. She enjoyed too just listening to others develop their points of view and you couldn't always finish discussions in class with so many people wanting to have input. She did it her way.

She had high expectations of people. I would feel integrity and respect for her which would well up inside me when she spoke. She had high expectations of herself and those she chose to relate to.

When she would correct me on an issue — never in a mean way — she would just be direct: "I think you are wrong," she would say and I can see her hand come up to her face to sweep her long black hair back and I'd look into those dark eyes and there would be this mischievous smile and the dimples and I knew I was in for a treat.

If she were my daughter I would have been so proud of her.

And this brings me to one final perspective. She initially would probably have been embarrassed by our feeble attempt to pay tribute to her today. She would have said: "No way, No way." But she did make a difference, she counted as far as we were concerned, we cared about her, we care about her and she would come to understand that and forgive us. She was just that way.

And I don't know about all of you, but I know that a few of these things that I have mentioned: Her desire to understand life, her quiet strength, her courage, her conviction, her sense of fun, her sense of peace with herself in spite of a world full of troubles, her desire to pursue a career where she thought she could best help others and a strong sense of what she looked like when she was so alive . . . All came flooding back on me this weekend and when I got a quiet moment, I was able to put all of this in a warm part of my heart where I know I can draw on it for strength in moments of need and reflection.

And she would be happy knowing that from her death others might draw strength and convictions to try to keep going forward into our future.

Where does the truth lie?

A Meditation for Sandy Bannon's Funeral by Rev. Ed Moll

I AM ANGRY AT GOD TODAY. I have a lot of questions. "Why?" seems to be the one that comes up the most often. Sandy's life, a life so full of promise and hope was suddenly, tragically taken away. So many things are confused and contradictory, blame gets shifted to others and then to self and then to others again. Words like "accident" or "intentional" get spoken and drift off into the silence of a searing grief. We are left wondering where the truth lies. We know where the power of death lies: was Mao Tse Tung right after all? From the barrel of a gun?

All of us are feeling very much like the writer of Lamentations: walking in darkness you lose all your landmarks and bearings, you feel that God, if there is a God, is against you. There is a weight on the chest and a lump in the throat, and a rage in your belly. "Damn!" you say "Damn!". And all of that is sorrow having its way with us.

But I have a gut feeling that we can't stop there. One of the marks of the Christian faith is its insistence that a human being names Jesus lived and died and rose from death. He was a relatively young man when he died—about 33. He was popular with the crowds, outspoken, helped people in their need, and spoke about a reign of God that would include everyone: friends, enemies, sinners and saints. He gathered a group of friends around him and travelled with them for about three years. Then one of this friends betrayed him to the authorities, who gladly wished him dead. They got their wish.

The friends were distraught, grieving, afraid. And then some women of their group said they saw Jesus, and then the rest saw him and the world has never been the same since.

Whatever it was they saw, they were convinced that death no longer had the last word on life. A fact of life, yes. When you are dead, you are gone. Paul writes "Since by a human being came death". The pain of that fact is with us as we remember Sandy. As we remember her we are also reminded of the frailty and the shortness of our life. And I think we grieve for that, too.

However, the deep comfort of the Christian faith is present and strong since Jesus is risen and alive, we too shall be raised to new life. Again Paul writes "So by a human being shall all be made alive". This life is not just for pie in the sky, but a life that transforms us here and now.

Christian faith proclaims that Sandy, having gone through hell and death (and those of you who loved her most know whereof I speak), is now risen, unseen in the presence of a merciful and loving God, changed into a new life beyond our wildest stretch of imagination. She is not here anymore in a way we can see with our eyes.

However, we are here. And Jesus is here. And if death does not have the last word on life, then the things that make for death have no last word, either. The power we think they have over us is broken. That means we can renounce that power and break the chains of denial, bitterness and despair; the chains of selfishness, greed and fear; the chains of war, murder and violence. They CAN be broken and some day even their shattered links will vanish altogether.

Do you believe that? Sandy will not have died in vain if we resolve this day to live as though death has no last word, and to work to break those chains, and to live together in the peace Jesus gives us.

This, my friends is where true power lies.

This is where we find comfort, and strength, and hope.

With flags waving ...

World War I brides needed all the welcome they could get

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

AFTER A JOURNEY which took them across the ocean to a country which was a world away from their beloved homes, the World War I war brides were heartened by the welcome they received in this new and strange country called Canada.

"At every stop everyone came out with flags waving so we didn't feel quite so bad," Lena Burton says of her train trip into the heart of Ontario. "We were so frightened. Everything was strange and there was a song going around called Keep Your Chin Up. That's what we did."

Indeed, "keep your chin up" became Mrs. Burton's motto in life, one which pushed away the fears and loneliness of being in a new country, and saw her through any of the other hardships life is often so full of.

Lena Garbutt was born on December 30, 1896, in a small Welsh village called Ludlow, near the English border. As a young woman, she opened a small shop in Plymouth and one day, a Canadian soldier on leave came in to browse. Bill Burton was obviously more smitten by the proprietress and on a subsequent visit, asked young Lena to marry him and make a home in Canada. In 1918 they were wed and by 1919, Mrs. Burton was sailing across the Atlantic with all the other war brides, their husbands having previously made the crossing.

Like the others, when Mrs. Burton sailed down the St. Lawrence, "we were looking for all the Indians — and we never saw one," she laughs, recounting her story in the activities room of Haliburton Extendicare.

With her new husband, she settled in Toronto, where he worked with the CNR. Thankfully, he had lots of family in Toronto — United Empire Loyalist stock — and his father especially helped ease the young war bride into Canadian life.

Injured and shell shocked in the war, in 1931, the Burtons bought an old homestead on Mountain Lake, where Mr. Burton was told the air would be better for his health. It was so much better that in two years he was able to return to work. But they kept the farm, returning in the summers.

The Burtons have two children, Jim, who now lives at the homestead with his wife Helen, and Marjory Shrarer, giving Mrs. Burton two grandchildren and four great grandchildren. Her husband died several years ago and after several trips back to Wales, Mrs. Burton is content with the peaceful atmosphere of Extendicare. Prior to this she also lived in the seniors apartments in Toronto.

"I'm so happy and comfortable here. This is the best place, lovely," she says with a voice which retains a hint of the Old World. Although it took a bit of getting used to, home is where the heart is, and her heart is now firmly embedded in Canada.

'Keep your chin up,' advises World War I war bride Lena Burton, above

TOO MUCH PUMPKIN: With Hallowe'en only a few weeks away, Scott, 8, and Jodi, 5, Curry are wondering what they're going to do with this 118 pound pumpkin. Their parents, Dan and Laurie of Haliburton, grew the mammoth squash in their backyard and are considering giving it to Victoria Street School.

Volunteers appreciated

SENIOR LEAGUE

by: WINNIFRED BARNUM

Congratulations to Cora Upton on her birthday September 22, 1991, and many happy returns.

Sincere thanks to May, Roy and Jacqueline for taking me to Wilda's and out for supper.

Faithful as always, Rev. John Burgess conducted chapel service Sunday evening and Alice Jones played the organ.

September 23, Maron Rose celebrated her birthday with her son Woody, friends from Toronto and Lola Prentice by having a lunch at Hyland Crest. They spent the afternoon with her.

Pat Bradburn and Fern Connelly showed movies in the auditorium.

Tuesday morning chapel service was taken by Pastor Jim Fast. That afternoon, Doris took us for a bus trip to see the leaves. We went to Birch Tree Corner, Lochlin across to Ingoldsby, along Kashagawigamog Lake to Haliburton, stopped at the Do-nut Shop before we started back home down Hwy. 121.

Wednesday afternoon, was a gala occasion when at least 100 volunteers, some who have done volunteer work for Hyland Crest since its beginning, gathered in the auditorium for tea and presentation of pins, to show in part our appreciation for all the many acts of voluntary work done by these people for our benefit and comfort. After a delicious tea prepared by dietary staff and Lynn Shirley, Dietary Supervisor, Rheta Jones, Administrator, welcomed everyone and introduced Bern Berry, Reeve and Gary McKnight, Chief Administrative Officer of Haliburton County, who performed the presentations with the help of Rheta Jones. Linda Fry, Adjuvant, named those receiving pins and gave a resume of what they have done voluntarily for Hyland Crest. Lynn Shirley and Grace Coburn cut a beautiful cake as the final to the afternoon.

Thursday tea party was provided by the ladies of the Kinmount Baptist Church. This tea was the birthday tea, and as it happened, Mary Oliver celebrated her 102nd birthday that day, September 26, so two birthday tables were set up. Mary Oliver and her family were seated at one and our birthday ladies at the other. In September we had Isabella Eastman, 102 years old on September 9th, Gladys Kirkpatrick on September 10, Nancy Carefoot on September 12, Annie Jones on September 15, Ann Collison on September 20, Cora Upton on September 22, Maron Rose on September 23 and Garnet Ash on September 14.

Pastor and Mr. Payne entertained us with piano and mouth organ music and Eileen Payne recited several poems from a scrap book she had compiled during her life.

Thursday evening bingo was played in the main dining room with Nancy and Troy Briggs calling for us.

Friday was Happy Hour with Grandfathers 5 providing the entertainment. They were Bill Payne, Charley Hadley, Eldon Deacon, Don Burch and George Smith. A draw was made for a beautiful crochet basket of flowers made by Mrs. Garnet Ash and the winning ticket was drawn by Garnet Ash. The winner was Alice Todd. The proceeds were for the Residents Donation Fund.

Ellen and Don Holden, Mary Guillemin and Connie Fullan ablely run the Happy Hour and care for the residents and friends.

Our thanks to all who brightened our week.

A LOT OF A LITTLE: The Little family held a reunion on Sunday at the Snowdon branch of the Haliburton County Public Library in Lochlin. Over 100 Littles attended the reunion, some travelling from Arizona and others from across the province. The original Highlands Littles settled in Blairhampton more than a century ago.

Flu shots protect vulnerable seniors

Medical experts report that the flu will be even worse this season than last. Every year in Canada thousands of people die from the flu while many others suffer the effects of this serious illness.

The flu is an extremely contagious respiratory disease which spreads across the country every winter. Up to 30 percent of the population may get the flu this year. Anyone can get the flu and even in healthy people it can be severe. The flu usually keeps people in bed for several days. Classic flu symptoms include a bad cough, fever, chills, aches and pains, weakness and a loss of appetite. People aged 65 and older the anyone with a chronic medical condition such as heart, lung, or kidney disease are in greater danger of suffering severe life threatening illness from the flu.

The flu can be prevented by getting an annual shot of vaccine. It is best that high risk individuals get vaccinated every September or October. Avoid an unpleasant and potentially dangerous bout of the flu, contact your family doctor for your flu shot.

News of fire hall open house catching on

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

This news is late in reaching our readers but it concerns Fire Prevention Week that is held from Oct. 6th to the 12th. Firemen from the Monmouth Fire Department will be visiting the school this year. They will be posting Open House at the Fire Hall on Sat. Oct. 12th from noon until 3 p.m. Refreshments will be served and one of the firemen will be on hand to answer questions concerning the Department.

A happy wedding event brightened a cloudy day when on Sept. 28th Cindy Smith and James Baumhour where married at the Harcourt Community Chapel. Wayne Rutter was the minister who performed the ceremony. Cindy, looking beautiful in sparkling white, was accompanied by three bridesmaids in lovely purple gowns and maid of honour in green velvet. The groom, best man and three handsome ushers where well dressed. Last but not least was tiny flower girl Kristy Smith who won the hearts of the many guests with her bashful walk down the aisle. Following the wedding everyone met for the reception at the Lloyd Watson Centre and a dance ended the festivities. Cindy and James will be residing at Elephant Lake Lodge. Best wishes for many happy years ahead.

With her usual warm hospitality Hilda Clark invites members of the Wilberforce heritage Guild to hold their meetings at the House in the Village. At the second Fall meeting we learned that work had been carried on at the Red Cross outpost building during the Summer. Guild member Gerald Shackleton, with assistance from volunteers Dud Godfrey, Don Wilson, Jack and Ian Daniels, made repairs to the outside of the building, installing new steps to the front and side porches. A new paint job will be done when the weather clears. Other items discussed were the signing of a five year lease with the Township and ideas for fund raising. Janet Barker from the Country Style Bakery presented some interesting samples of cakes and cookies available for sales by Guild members. While the meeting was in session a quilt that had been set up in an adjoining room was receiving beautiful stitches from the fingers of our finest needlewomen. This quilt will be raffled when completed. Next meeting to be held Oct. 15th.

On Sunday Sept. 29th the congregation of the Wilberforce United Church congratulated their visiting minister the Rev. Arthur Lentz and his wife Pearl on the anniversary of their 55 years together. The Rev. Arthur Lentz is a retired minister from Cross Lake. He sometimes conducts service at Maynooth. On Sunday Oct. 13th. Kristal McGee will take the church service in South Wilberforce United Church.

Members of the Monmouth Agricultural Society will be serving one of their famous turkey dinners on Oct. 12th at the Lloyd Watson Centre from 5 to 7 p.m.

Rotha Bryant of Norland, accompanied her son-in-law, Max Green and his son Jeff of Green River, on a trip to Calgary, where they rented a car and travelled to Banff and Jasper and on out to visit the Frank Bryant family at Clearwater, B.C. They enjoyed a helicopter ride over Mount Robinson and had great weather for all of their holiday.

The community was shocked to learn of the sudden death of Joan Rumney on Tuesday. Just 57 she lived on Elizabeth Street, and was quite active. Joan was the wife of the late Robert Rumney and the daughter of the late Bill and Jessie Rutter. Joan has a number of relatives in the West Guilford area, her mother being one of the Sims family.

Another sudden death was when the proprietor of the fish and chips restaurant at Union Creek near Crystal Lake Road, died suddenly on Friday. Sympathy goes out to these bereaved families.

Jim Boyce of Norland, came home on Thursday, following open heart surgery in Toronto General Hospital. Hope you take care of yourself Jim and continue to grow stronger.

The Ladies Missionary Group held its regular meeting at the Norland Baptist Church and held a surprise bridal shower for Gloria Cameron who was married at the Baptist church on Sat. Oct. 5th. Several novel gift items provided some amusement for the group.

We are still busy making calls to doctors', clinics, labs, hospitals, etc.

John and Joan Bryant are back to work in their insurance office after a holiday in Florida.

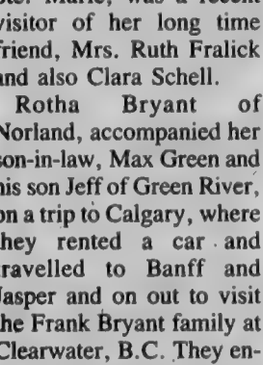
Keep in mind the turkey dinner at the Somerville—Burnt River Centre at Burnt River on Oct. 12th from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Winners in the Civitan Club draw on Sept. 25th were: First Prize, a hand made quilt won by Gladys Carson of Mississauga; Second Prize, a $50. I.G.A. food voucher was won by J. McCaffrey of Mississauga. Third Prize, Five Wintario Tickets was won by Marion Beer of Fenelon Falls.

The Coboconk Seniors are busy making plans for a Christmas bazaar, to be held on November 30th.

Edith Johnson of Haliburton and I, also Joan Cooper of West Guilford attended an Avon preview and time of opinions and questions regarding new products, at a meeting at Holiday Inn

My sister in Lindsay was one of the unfortunate ones to have her car spray painted, when two adults sprayed her car and several others, set fire to a dingy on the Skylark Cruise boat etc. on Wed. Sept. 25th. And have you noticed the picnic tables from our community parks have been taken across the water and lie in water by the Bank of Commerce!! One wonders what fun there is in such acts. Do we really have so many idiots at large in our great country? I think they have too much leisure time because if they were working, they'd have no time for such acts. We have so many decent folks, yet a few can cause such a headache to the police who patrol



The YWCA of Peterborough, Victoria and Haliburton is pleased to announce the election of Ruth Smith as President.

She is a professor and the Professional Development Co-ordinator for the School of Business at Sir Sandford Fleming College.

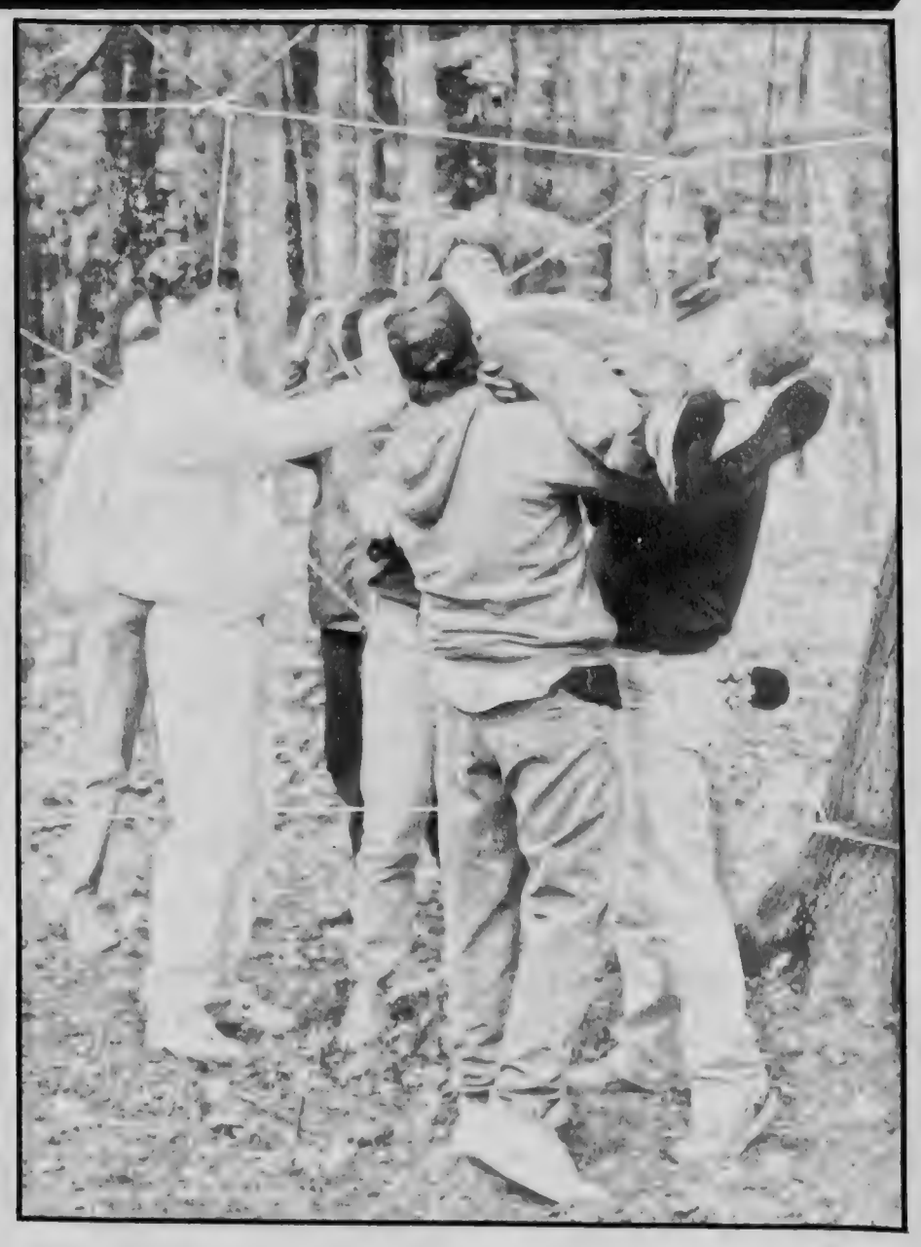
Taking a class on the wild side

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor



When a group of students from Orillia and Barrie visited Haliburton Forest, they learned a lot about their ability to work as a team, and how man must make sure nature's team of plants and animals is also kept in harmony

The wooded, challenging course was a bit like Outward Bound's

Taking a miss on fire brigade

"IS THERE A BONUS POINT for being dirty?" the teenaged girl asks the group of adults, many of them teachers. Getting the answer yes, she drops to her knees and grinds her track pants into the dark loam which is the forest floor. Then she jumps up, gives a warrior's whoop, and runs off with the rest of her team.

This isn't an ordinary classroom.

A few metres away, Carrie Halliday looks up the height of the wall and says "I can't do it." One of the girls standing on a platform amongst the trees says, "Don't worry about it" and the 16-year-old tosses up her egg. Once caught, Carrie now has to follow its skyward journey. Two boys on the ground give her a boost as she struggles up the wall. She drops, frantically grabbing onto the rope, is pushed up again, and two girls lift her ungracefully over the top of the wall. "This is kind of like being a piece of playdough," Carrie says as she attempts to recover her self-confident poise.

This is kind of like no ordinary classroom.

Down the hill, deep in the forest, Robert Pye has his egg in his mouth and he's writhing through the holes of six tires suspended in a row by rope. Careful not to bite, he tumbles out of the last tire and falls onto a girl from Ohio. Nonchalantly, she looks up from her sprawled position and says "Compromising positions here."

If this is an ordinary classroom, a lot of students would want to enroll.

What this is is a three-day school project at Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve, next door to Kennisis Lake. It involves 32 students from four Barrie high schools, three Orillia high schools, and members of Ohio's VICA Club — Vocational Industrial Clubs of America.

A few years ago, an Orillia technical teacher, Ray Keery, went down to Ohio to see VICA in action and he liked what he saw. VICA promotes leadership skills, as well as an awareness that knowledge is best when it's put to work and not kept on the shelves of academe. Every year there's a U.S. Skills Olympics; competitors start at the high school level and then move on to county, state and finally national competitions.

Upon returning home, Keery worked with the Simcoe County Board of Education to form Skills Canada, the Canadian equivalent of VICA, which they hope will grow as large as the American counterpart.

Last year, a Canadian won a bronze medal in VICA's computer-aided drafting competition, and 16-year-old Robert, the teenager with an egg in his mouth, wasn't at all tongue tied when he competed in the public speaking category.

"It was fabulous," the Orillia student says after he gave the egg to his team's egg guardian. "I competed against the best public speakers in each state and came in the top 12.

"Now I can stand up in front of anybody. I've gained an incredible amount of self-confidence because of the fact I've done so well at it. I know how to take ideas and incorporate them into things that work. It's because of that confidence I think that I can do it."

It's a self-perpetuating circle: if students believe they can succeed, they will not be nervous about trying new things. Once they taste success, they will feel better about themselves. The better they feel, the more they're responsive to new ideas and challenges. And so on. It's working at Haliburton Forest.

On Thursday morning, the students are taking part in War and Pieces. The night before there was a dance, a chance to break the ice. Now they have been put into four teams of eight, and sing the Davey Crockett song as they run through the woods from one event to another. Some are dressed in fashionable leggings; many boys have taken off their shirts, despite the coolness of the autumn wind.

In many respects, the series of events is like Outward Bound, with the emphasis on team spirit rather than personal achievement. There's the wall they have to climb, the lesson in archery, pretending they're a fire brigade. Complete strangers have become friends and have learned to trust each other to see them through. When there's a problem, they won't hesitate to ask others to help them solve it.

Later in the afternoon, the focus will be on more serious subjects, such as forestry, wildlife, fisheries and how to run a quality meeting. Haliburton Forest was chosen as the classroom because it is an entire ecosystem, says Wally Van Dyke, the technical resource person with the Simcoe board.

"There are so many educational opportunities here," he says. "The integration of land uses is a good example for our government as well."

Kimberly Lehet, a 17-year-old student from Parma, Ohio, remembers the day the river that runs through Cleveland caught on fire because there was so much pollution in the water. Since then, Cleveland and the state have put a much greater emphasis on the environment as they try to literally clean up their act.

Americans need to learn more about how their actions affect both their own natural surroundings and Canada's, she says. Kimberly has been to Toronto once and her brother likes hockey so she knows a bit about the country. The Skills Canada camp is an opportunity to learn more, even though she wasn't expecting it to be this cold. "People aren't as aware (about Canada) as they should be."

This isn't the first time students from the Barrie area have made use of Haliburton Forest's facilities, nor will it be the last. (Oddly enough, no local school groups visit the Forest.) Bob Read, the technical director at Innisdale high school, has a cottage on Little Kennisis Lake, and two years ago, learned that some snowmobilers had burnt down a cabin on the Forest's property. He volunteered his students to build a new 24' by 28' cabin; students are about to begin their fifth building this fall, an outdoor education centre with a display area and weather station.

In keeping with one of the goals of the program, one of the buildings was constructed by an all-female crew. "Girls interact differently when they're by themselves," Van Dyke says. "They won't stand back and let the guys do it."

Girls tend to shy away from tech (which in Van Dyke's lingo stands for both technical and technology.) That's something the Simcoe board wants to change. "We need keen minds in tech and these aren't limited to males." As well, women tend to be relegated to low-paying jobs and aren't aware of the opportunities to be found in an industrially competitive world.

But it's also the academics who are blind to the importance of technology, Van Dyke says.

"Skills Canada tries to raise the image of technology classes, it's not just woodworking and autobody." He's planning a Professional Development day where teachers will go into the work place to see how skills relate to jobs. Schools are very good at preparing students for university, but fumble when it comes to preparing them for the work world.

"Teachers don't understand application of skills so they don't know how to teach students how to apply that knowledge," he says. For instance, when he was teaching tech, students didn't know how to apply their math skills to real life problems. Or perhaps the student who gets an A on garden imagery in Tess of the D'Ubervilles doesn't know how to write a memo to co-workers. Using another example, if a student can't use words to describe how to tie a shoelace, they'll never be able to program a robotics program, for which each movement must be deciphered, analyzed, and translated into a language a computer can understand.

When a student falls short in the work place, employers interpret this to mean the student doesn't know how to do the job; it might just mean the student doesn't see the link between working on math problems at their desk at school, and learning that unless you use the backwards slash, your computer won't know what you're talking about.

"Applied learning is critical to our educational process," says Van Dyke, warming up to the subject with the fervor of a true believer. "If you learn by doing, you'll do well, but they should be doing this throughout their education. With people who can excel, we tell them they don't need to apply it and move on to the next level. Eventually they're educated with a bias against application."

We've all heard about the engineer or architect who works well on paper but doesn't understand the realities and processes of the building world.

Carrie Halliday comes through

The architect who designs a wall should also understand how it will go up — and stay up.

"The sooner Canadians understand the opportunities in tech, the better off we will be," Van Dyke says.

Getting the students out of the classroom and into the Forest is just one way this can be achieved. After they're through here, however, these students are bound to come up with a lot more ideas. That's what this school is about.

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

The Loyal Societies' gala dinner in honour of the Honourable Lincoln N. Alexander and her Honour, Mrs. Yvonne P. Alexander, OS and J, has held on Sept. 20, 1991. Our community was represented in the person of Mrs. Murray Scott. Cecilia Scott has been corps staff officer and responsible for the cadets in the position of training officer for the organization over her 18 active years with St. John Ambulance.

Loyal Societies include Army and Air Cadet Leagues Duke of Edinburgh's Award, Navy League, Korea Veterans Association, R.C.M.P., Ontario P.P., St. Andrew's Societies, St. David's Society, Monarchist Leagues, St. John's Ambulance, Scouts Canada, Women's Canadian Club, HMCS York, The Law Society of Upper Canada, and Military and Hospitaller Order of St. Lazarus of Jerusalem to name about one third of the societies in this distinguished body.

Our sympathy is with Sylvia Sisson whose dear mother, Mrs. Cole, died last week. Sylvia went to Newfoundland to attend her mother's funeral. Mrs. Cole endeared herself to many of us years ago when she used to visit the Holly Sisson families. She was such a cheery soul, even as she recovered from a broken hip here. She would knit and chat in her clipped accent of her active days raising a large family down east. It was obviously a happy family, a tradition Sylvia ha carried on with Holly for their own nine children who will keenly miss this beloved grandmother.

Our annual Harvest Thanksgiving service was held at St. Andrew's on Sunday, Sept. 29. The Church was beautifully and bountifully decorated with autumn colours and produce. (The latter went to Extendicare next day). The congregation produced a highly enjoyable pot luck supper which was well attended and attested to the gratitude we feel for God is bounty towards us.

September 29, 1991 was also notable for another event: a son, Joshua, was born to Esther (Cooper) and Graydon Sipe at Civic Hospital in Peterborough. Congratulations to parents and to grandparents Joan and Basle Cooper.

St. Peter's Thanksgiving Dinner on Oct. 12th repeats its annual magnificent meal. Tickets are available at Foster's Store: Phone 489-2888. Settings are at 5, 6 and 7 p.m. Randell's also have tickets: 754-2302. Prices are: Adults $10., Children 12 and under $5., pre-schoolers, free.

Our sympathy to the Barry family in the death of Lyle Mackay, husband of Naida (daughter of Arthur and Myra). Lyle's funeral was in Huntsville with interment at the Twelve Mile Lake Cemetery, on Oct. 2nd 1991. Ladies from the Baptist Church here provided refreshments afterwards at the Centre.

Church is filled as teenager is mourned

CARNARVON NEWS

by ANNE MCKAY

I am sorry to say the news that has been given to me is not good news this week.

The funeral service for Sandy Bannon last Monday was the largest one our Church has ever seen. The Church was filled to over flowing including porch, choir loft and C.E. Building and many stood outside. Many of her school friends came to pay their respects. We mourn the passing of this lovely young lady.

Jim Brannigan, son of Keith and Mabel, was involved in an accident on Wednesday in Haliburton. We send him our good wishes and hope he will be around again soon.

Our cousin Lyle McKay of Huntsville passed away after a painful battle with Cancer. Funeral services were held on Wednesday in Huntsville and burial at Twelve Mile Lake Cemetery. Lyle and his family lived in Carnarvon when he grew up. His brother Daryl from Vancouver B.C. came home to attend.

Get well wishes to Vera Bagshaw who is recuperating at home following surgery in Civic Hospital Peterborough.

I certainly hope next week's items will be on the bright side.

Driver subsidy is increased

HOME SUPPORT

by: DONNA PACEY

At the Sept. 23rd, 1991 Board of Directors meeting of Haliburton County Home Support Services (HCHSS) they mad a motion to have the requested budgeted transportation subsidy paid to the volunteers to help cover out of pocket expenses on a quarterly bases instead of once a year for both the Meals on Wheels and Transportation programs.

These amounts will be paid upon documented mileage (ie: the volunteer must submit the mileage to the office (amounts only. The volunteers have the choice to keep the money or to return it to HCHCSS).

From January 1991 to June 14, 1991, the subsidized amount for transportation under the transportation program was $.18 per km. Client cost was $.09 per km. After that date the subsidized amount is $.12 per km. Client cost is now $.15 per km.

Effective January, 1991 meals on wheels drivers are paid $.27 per km.

We appreciate the support and commitment of our volunteers to the clients and to the agency to enable Seniors and Disabled Persons to remain independent in their own homes for a longer period.

We invite you to become part of our team of volunteers. Please contact us any weekday between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. to find out more information.

With the winter months ahead won't you please get involved and help your neighbour?

Lions donate bears

The summer is over and the Haliburton County Ambulance Service with the Haliburton Lions Club is helping some of the children carried on our ambulances.

Before the summer really started the Lions Club was contacted by Larry Blanchard of the H.C.A.S. about putting Teddy Bears on all county ambulances. After it was determined that the Teddy must be cuddly, washable and not over 8'' (due to space available to carry them) we located a wholesale source.

At first the bears were white but after some feed back from the attendants it was decided to have some coloured ones as well.

An Ambulance ride for a small child can at times be a very traumatic experience, and the attendants like to have something to take the child's mind off what is going on around them. So giving the child a ''Teddy'' to cuddle seems to be the ''magic trick''.

Our goal is to keep a Teddy available for each child who for any reason has to be transported by ambulance.

Many thanks from both services to those who donated to get this project underway.

With everyone's help we can change a scary experience for a child and also in a small way help the Haliburton County ambulance service to carry out its much appreciated service.

Thanks again for your continued support so that this will be an on going thing. Watch for the pictures of the Large Bears at different locations in the county. These Bears will assure that the Baby Bears will always ride our Ambulances.

From the Members of the Haliburton Lions Club and the Staff of Haliburton County Ambulance Services.

ALMOST IN TIME FOR THANKSGIVING: A long-standing joke at Kennisis Lake is that just as the Thanksgiving turkey had finished its stint in the oven, the power would go off because everyone else had turkeys in the oven too. For the past weeks, Ontario Hydro has been trying to prevent that from happening again. Crews have been out on the Kennisis Lake Road stringing high voltage line to hook up with the new distribution station on the road. However, because it's been harder than expected to get through the bush, and crews don't want to be traipsing about during hunting season, the job won't be completed before Christmas.

OHIP changes are a necessary evil: MPP

DRAINVILLE'S DIARY

MPP
Dennis
Drainville

I WOULD LIKE TO TAKE some time to explain the changes to Ontario's out of country OHIP policy and how it will benefit all the people of Ontario.

Everyone in Ontario still has OHIP coverage when they lave the country. However, as of Oct. 1 of this year, Ontario will fund all out of country hospital bills at the same rate as is currently paid to Ontario hospitals. For example, OHIP will continue to pay $400 per day for such high level care as surgery and $200 per day for less intense care. Travellers should purchase private insurance to cover any bills for out of country hospitals that EXCEED these amounts.

The changes to out of country OHIP coverage brings Ontario into line with other provinces. All other provinces and territories already have policies that limit the amounts paid for out of country hospital services. Some are less generous that Ontario. For example, British Columbia pays only $75 per day for out of country hospital care. Note the new policy applies only to hospital services. The payment policy for medical and physician services remains the same.

What is the rationale behind this change? Quite simply, we can no longer afford to subsidize the U.S. hospitals. Remember they are profit driven and have no universal public health insurance such as we in Canada have come to take for granted. The cost to the province for U.S. hospital services has more than doubled in the last three years. In 1990/91 the total spent was over $200 million! Surely some of that amount would be better spent on our own health care system which provides service to all Ontarians.

Some constituents are concerned that this is a hardship on our 'snowbirds'. The policy is not an attack on seniors, rather it is an across the board change affecting all ages and all out of country hospital funding and will bring such funding into line with the realities of health care costs. The Ministry of Health's budget is one third of the entire Ontario Budget at $16.7-billion per year. I'm sure most people realize that Ontario hospitals must take priority over American hospitals. Should we see our own already hard pressed hospitals suffer to prop up the American system?

Private health insurance companies are offering to provide extra insurance to cover costs that exceed the OHIP limits. Remember they are fully aware of just how expensive out of country health care has become and their fees will reflect that reality. Private health companies are just that, private enterprise, and they will set their own fees and schedules according to the market.

The Ministry of Health has a toll free number for Ontario residents with questions about the new funding policy: 1-800-268-1154.
